Klein High School

16715 Stuebner-Airline
Spring, Texas 77379

"It was the best of times; it was the best of times." With the crazy eighties in full swing, everyone was searching for some constancy and direction; at school, most found this quest miraculously fulfilled. Like students throughout history, everyone was also searching for stimulation and excitement; at school most found this quest, too fulfilled.

Klein's people unquestionably made the school what it was this year. Faculty and staff worked all year to provide students with unparalleled challenge and opportunity. Students of all shapes, sizes, and interests interacted every day, in the classroom and out of it, keeping student life interesting.

Special attractions added spice to weekends and weekdays as the school often found itself transformed into a hub of social activity after 2:15. A multitude of organizations and extracurricular activities enriched Klein's educational experience in various ways and made for some fascinating and enjoyable afternoons. And other wonders too numerous to mention brought even more enlightenment and entertainment to the school year.

To merely say that Klein had great diversity this year would be hopelessly inadequate. Thus without much exaggeration we can make the bold assertion that the following pages effectively prove: this year, Klein had it all.

Diversity offered with multitude of courses

No school can claim to have it all without offering a wide variety of excellent courses, both academic and elective. Such diversity can definitely be found at Klein. Depending upon individual personality and interests, students chose to enroll in those courses that were most suitable to their own future plans.

When planning the yearly schedule, students selected from courses such as cosmetology, child development, newspaper, reporting, drama, typing, choir and many others along with the basics of English, math, science and social studies.

Fortunately this year, to even further enlarge Klein's course selection, administrators introduced new and exciting courses including photography, advanced reading, clothing and textiles and diet and nutrition.

There were many outstanding courses offered at many different skill levels and taught by true professionals, enabling Klein to delight in having it all.

Spectrum of people colors Klein

Like many shades in the spectrum of colors, there were many different kinds of students at Klein, each of whom added flavor to the educational experience.

Perhaps most evident, especially on Fridays, were drill team members. Somewhat more reserved were the varsity athletes who wore team jerseys on the days of their events to show team unity.

Also present were those students who dressed as if out of magazines and catalogs such as GQ or L.L. Bean. These people contributed to the distinctive aura at Klein. Others showed their individuality by wearing brightly colored "fame" style clothes or by taking on the "new wave" look.

Students were not the only people who added to Klein's spectrum of people. Administrators made sure that students' days ran smoothly. Workers made school lunches tasty as well as nutritious.

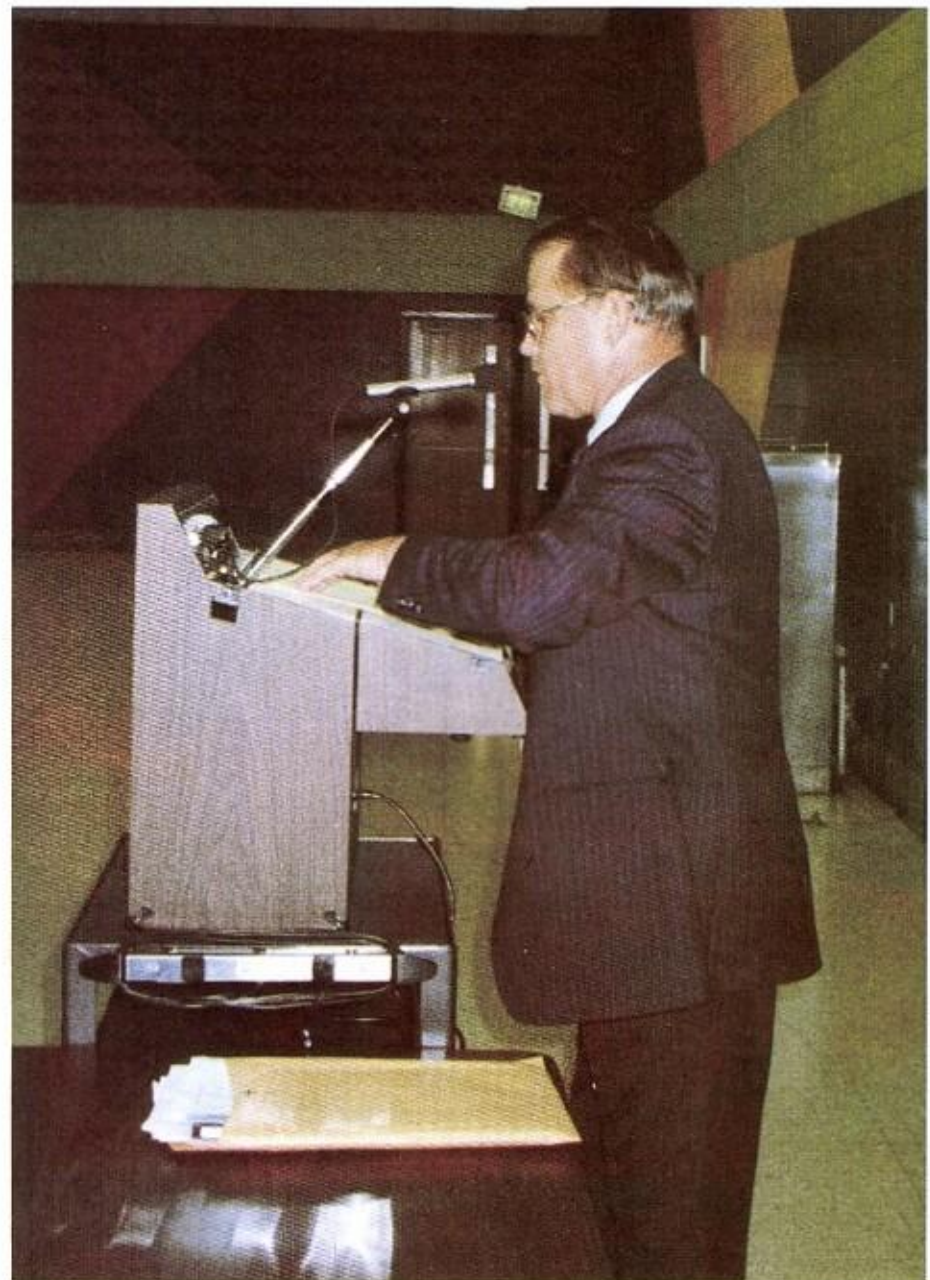

Such a broad spectrum of people added much to Klein's school life, enabling students to learn with and about many different people.

Klein area offers array of social events

Along with the exuberance and enthusiasm of everyday life, inhabitants of Klein were able to get involved with special and spectacular events after school and on weekends. Sporting events provided excitement and entertainment for anxious spectators. Pep rallies, dress-up days, after-game dances, and the like allowed everyone to harmlessly vent frustrations or merely have a good time. Performing groups, very serious in their work, were a rich supplement to local life.

Of course, the school could not always be the center of social activity. Numerous facilities and organizations supplied "outside" recreational opportunities. Many enjoyed the annual rodeos held throughout the area; those with more contemporary tastes attended rock and popular music concerts as a favorite pastime. Through all of these activities, Klein people took part in the bustling vitality of Houston. Endless events, just as varied and interesting as Klein's people, guaranteed a social life that was never less than electrifying, and definitely having it all.

Despite the school's tremendous diversity, no one ever forgot that Klein was first and foremost an institution of learning. In a year which found education standards throughout the country coming into question, the quality of its core academic program remained second to none.

College bound students worked through their classes diligently, striving to prepare themselves for the perils of higher education. Those graduating discovered substantial rewards for their efforts, as their applications were highly regarded by admissions officers; those with one or more years to go were encouraged somewhat by the success of their predecessors.

Even for students whose educational careers would end after high school, time spent learning the "fundamentals" was far from wasted. Skills learned in English, science and math classes proved to have great practical value, while they stimulated and expanded eager minds.

All students marched through required courses and electives resolutely, remembering when all else failed that everything was "for their own good."

New Beginning

Renovations in many areas of Klein High School were begun last summer and continued throughout the years. "Freshen up" became the motto for the maintenance force and contractors employed by Klein Independent School District.

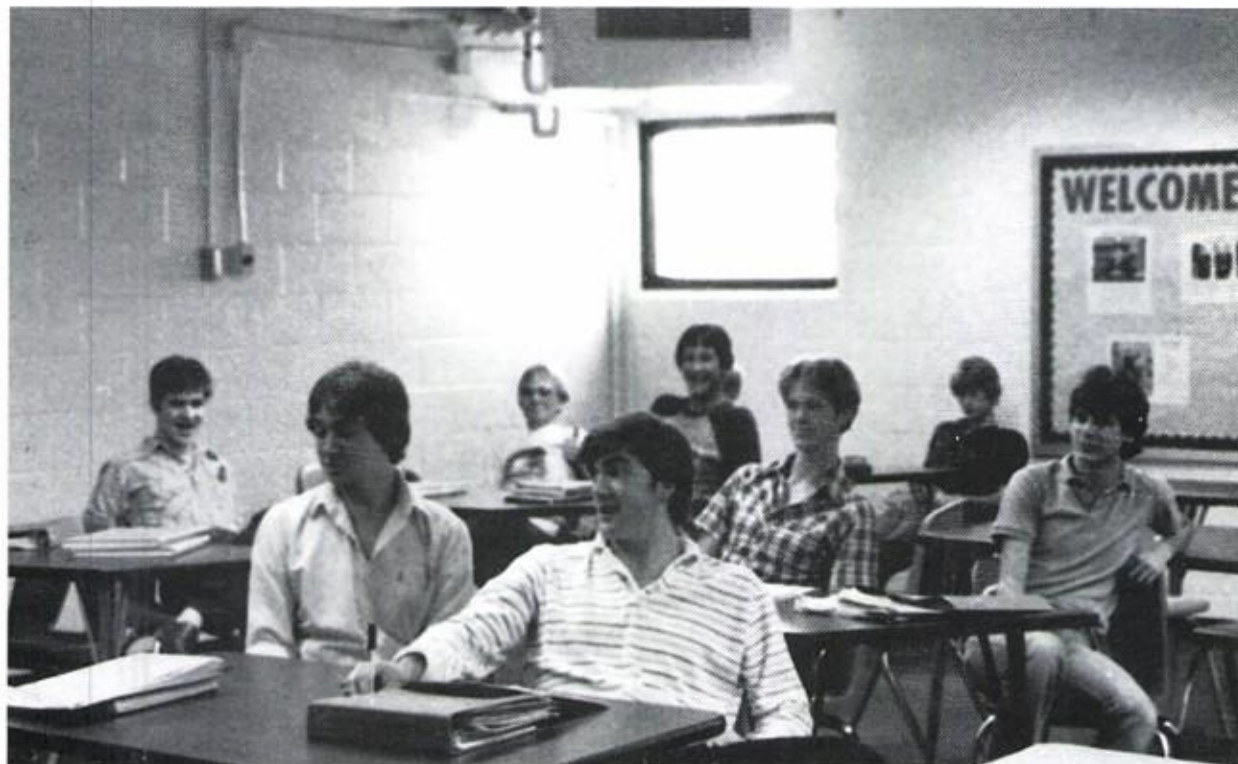

Restorations to ceilings in the cafeteria, clinic, counselors' office, and main halls brightened these areas. Reroofing and needed ceiling repairs were completed also in the auditorium.

The math and English areas were made more colorful by new coats of paint while the journalism and previous art rooms were completely transformed. The former room for art instruction became the new speech office and classroom. The VEH shop now occupies a converted storage room.

Sidewalks were poured around the High Rise delivering students from puddle jumping on rainy days. Improvements to the stadium also added to the betterment of the campus as light fixtures were replaced and concrete areas, damaged by the storms last year, were repaired reconstructed.

Counselors aim students toward future goals

The job of the counselors was anything but easy. It involved time consuming paper and computer work, not to mention the many hours spent in conferences with students and parents.

The counselors' major objective was to help students to recognize and achieve their goals. They gave advice on courses to take and presented the students with as many alternatives as possible to a problem. Besides changing students schedules, counselors had to deal with the administration of standardized tests and preparation for College Night.

Counselor Carol Young expressed her satisfaction with the overall staff moral, "I think Klein High School has a great counseling staff. Everyone is concerned for the student!"

Counselors were: Kay Harbeck, Barbara Martin, Karen Pant, Carol Young, Diane Fishero, Darlene McCue, Barbara Seelhorst, Fred Holt, Janelle Watson and Tommye Fant.

Performers reveal hidden talent

The Fine Arts Department revealed the talents of many individuals. Whether in choir, drama, band, orchestra, art, or journalism, everyone had a point to get across.

In the choir room, students sang out and brought music to life. Band and orchestra students prepared for upcoming concerts and halftime shows. The auditorium was filled with the sound of banging hammers and lines being rehearsed as drama students built sets and practiced plays. In the journalism room, writers' thoughts could not be seen or heard. Only the looks on their faces expressed what was going on in their minds. The art room was a work of art itself. Art students showed their talents through paintings, drawings and sculptures.

History repeats itself

Social Studies was a class which gave students a chance to learn about the past and present. Teachers made an effort to make each day of history interesting for all students. Some history teachers found dressing up in the time period they were studying effective for their students. Others found debates and class discussions to be educational.

One teaching technique found especially interesting was that of Ann Johnston, world history teacher. Johnston said that she liked to make her students "live" in the time period that they were studying. Each student had two projects required for the year. The subject or time period that most interested the student was what his project was based on.

Johnston found this course a very important one for all Klein students because history is known to repeat itself. Johnston stated, "everything we have has been taken from the past and built upon to the world's present situation."

Languages emphasized

With more colleges requiring two years of a foreign language, Klein's foreign language department experienced an increase in student enrollment. Many student activities were planned to celebrate events such as the German Tricentennial in October and Foreign Language Week in March. The annual film festival and potluck supper was held in September. Students brought a variety of foods and dressed in clothing from many different countries.

Not only was interest shown in extracurricular activities, but students also participated in games, dialogues, and skits throughout the year during class. Students and teachers found that learning was something more than just tests and quizzes. Self-satisfaction was achieved by reaching out across land and ocean to learn of customs and traditions in other nations.

Labs stimulate student interest

The science program appealed to future scientists through experiments in the laboratory and with a multitude of science films. Science lectures also encouraged students to absorb greater knowledge.

Chemical labs in physical science introduced beginning students to a variety of interesting experiments. The labs were designed to initiate students to the use of various scientific procedures.

Biology was offered to students after completing physical science. One of the more interesting biology labs was the dissecting lab. The fetal pig lab presented students with hands-on experience.

Knowledge gained through science courses presented an interesting variety of invaluable information.

On the job training

First-hand experience is a vital key to future careers. Students were able to receive on the job training from Klein's career training classes.

Students enrolled in career training attended morning classes. After school the students worked an average of 15 hours a week at a wide spectrum of employment. Sponsor John Hobbs maintained close communication with students' employees by weekly visitations.

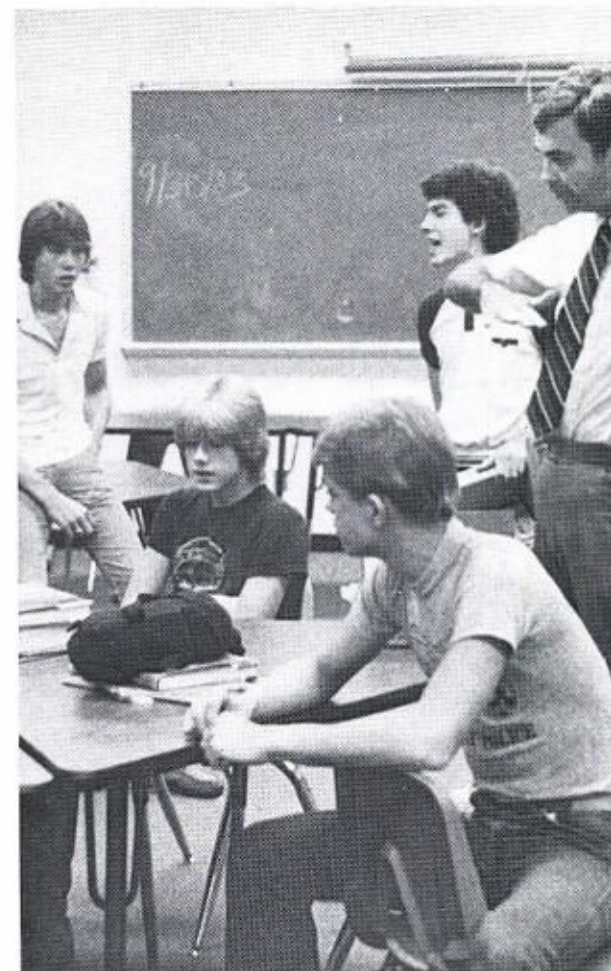

"My job is part coach, part spy," said Mr. Hobbs. "I try to help with academics and build self-esteem."

Other aspects of the career training program at Klein were: cosmetology, typing, personal business management, agriculture, air conditioning and refrigeration, auto mechanics, mechanical trades, and many other beneficial programs to aid students in future careers.

A step up from the slide rule

Math at Klein could be approached from various angles. Some students liked to take the faster, lazier route of using a calculator while others used piles upon piles of scratch paper. Other students turned to more sophisticated equipment such as the computer to help evaluate problems. Calculators and computers were an advancement from the slide rule our parents once used.

The different angles ran from the finger method to computers. Students in their first year of high school usually took algebra which involved using a calculator. Geometry dealt more with angles, and students turned to compasses, rulers and protractors to learn to measure and use angles. Later, Trig./E.A. traveled farther into the unknown. Formulas for finding variables were forever embedded into the brain.

As well as some of the required courses there were also math courses for special needs. Computer math taught students to operate and program computers. Calculus was offered to eligible students, thus eliminating the need for the course in college.

All in all a wide variety of math courses were offered to help reach the needs of all students.

Electives spark enthusiasm

First Aid and Driver's Education were not just ordinary electives. Students who eagerly anticipated these courses were seldom disappointed. Although these courses were not required, students found First Aid and Driver's Education enlightening and beneficial.

Not many people found Herb Allen's class for future drivers of America monotonous. During this nine-week course students learned basic driving rules and driving techniques. Classes enjoyed speakers who were representatives of the railroad, Houston Police Department, and insurance companies. Students appeared to enjoy Allen's class as he discussed common problems with which drivers must deal. Allen found pleasure in asking unusual and thought-provoking questions. One of his favorite questions was "What does one do at a flashing green light?". Indeed, Coach Allen captivated the students' interest through his creative teaching methods.

During the next nine weeks, the students found themselves absorbed in the teaching techniques of Jim Greene. First Aid students, mostly sophomores and juniors, were ready to encounter the bandages, cardiopulmonary resuscitation and the artistry of administering mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to first-aid mannequin, Miss Annie. Each student had the pleasure of demonstrating for the class this life-saving process. One of the highlights of these weeks of study was Coach Greene's tragic story of "Nate the Snake."

For sure, First Aid and Driver's Education did not depict the usual traits of the regular academic class.

New courses offered

Three new courses were offered to expand students' academic choices. Preparations for College Admissions was geared for college-bound seniors; Photography gave shutter-bugs a chance to develop their skills; and Advanced Reading was aimed at increasing reading comprehension levels.

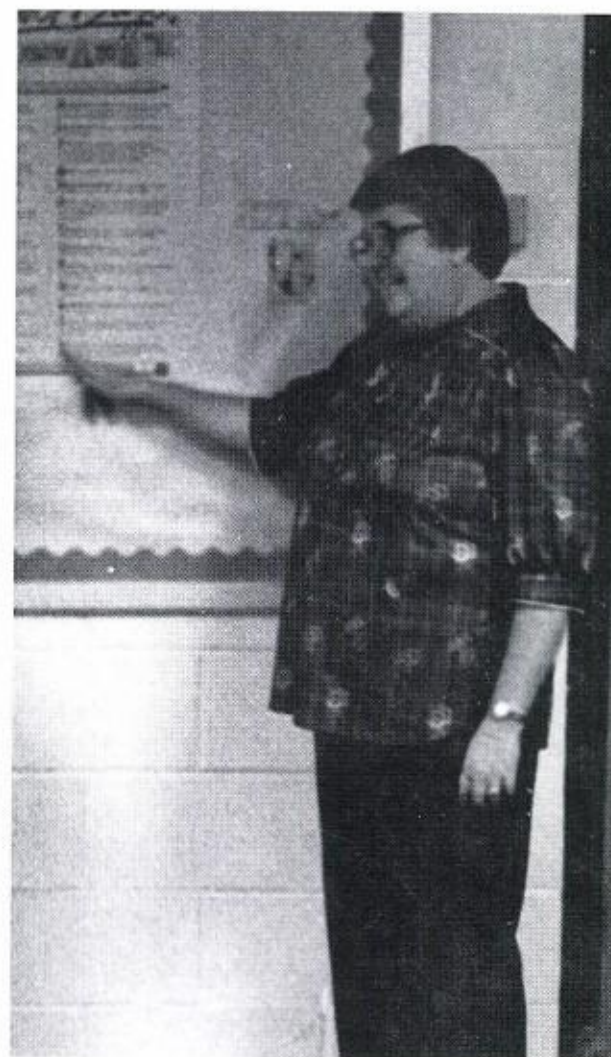

The PCA course, taught by JoAnn Pfeffer, not only gave a summary of the different colleges, but it also helped students prepare for the SAT. In addition, it assisted a student in his preparation for college life. Books were bought at the beginning of the year and computer software was used to develop verbal and mathematical skills. At the end of the year each student prepared a report on a certain college and orally presented it, so that the class could get an overview of at least 20 colleges.

A new semester Photography course was introduced this year. Taught by Robert Mosier, the students studied both photography composition and darkroom techniques. Most of the pictures taken by the students were outdoors and were sent to local newspapers or contests. Two years of some form of art or crafts were required to join the Photography class.

The third new course was Advanced Reading, taught by Jo Ann Wunderlich and Kay Lynn Moran. The curriculum involved study and reading skills, computer comprehension and a general preparation for college. The class was split into several small groups according to the student's abilities. During the week, timed readings and closed tests were taken to sharpen the student's reading and comprehension skills.

These courses proved to be useful either for study or recreational needs.

Clubs and organizations served the important purpose of bringing together students of similiar interests for similar goals. Like dessert after a tough day of academic courses, club meetings were a time to learn in an informal atmosphere, without the pressures found in the usual classroom setting. Given much flexibility by the administration, each club was free to plan its own meeting dates and activities.

Due to the varied interests of students, there were many different clubs. For the sports oriented, there was the Bass Fishing Club, the Wilderness Club, and the Ski Club. For those wanting diversion from the ordinary pace of school, there was the Bowling Club, the Chess Club and the Klein Association of Sound to name just a few. And numerous organizations such as the Future Business Leaders of America and the Medical Careers Club were designed for the career-oriented.

Whether they were interested in programming computers or following politics, students were able to find an organization to fit their interests. Many active clubs and organizations at Klein were the icing on the cake to a school that had it all.

Organizations

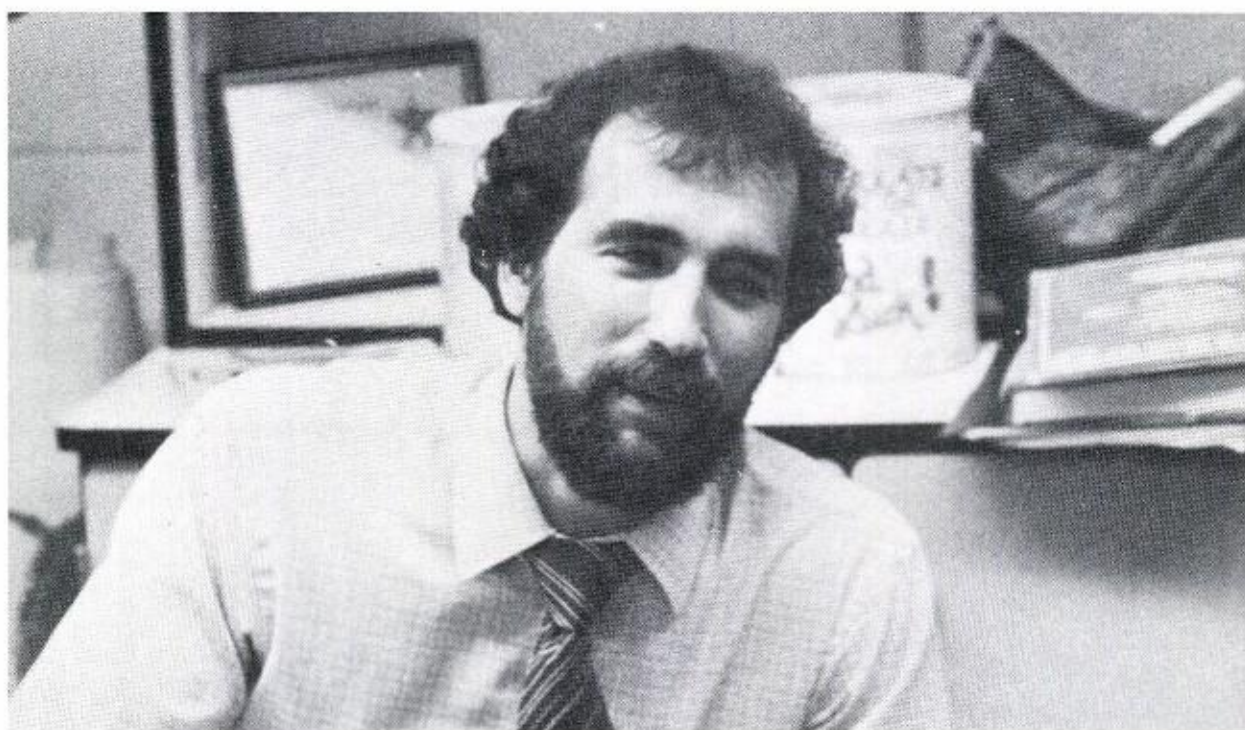

Stuco sparks enthusiasm

GO MAD! Everyone saw it, but what did it mean? These words were spread throughout the campus all year long. Students found this command on the cafeteria calendar, in the main hall, printed on shirts, and with a cheerful note on the morning announcements. The Student Council promoted its 1983-84 theme, "GO MAD", with enthusiasm, encouraging the student body to "Go Out and Make A Difference." The response was tremendous! GO MAD became an acronym that positively influenced the overall attitude at Klein.

Months before the 7:35 a.m. bell rang on the first day of school, Student Council officers and representatives were hard at work planning activities for the new year. "GRIN", the theme for freshman orientation, challenged incoming students to "Get Really Involved Now." The orientation helped fish get more acquainted with Klein's campus and its activities. The council also sponsored a teachers' breakfast in August. Teachers obviously appreciated this break from their busy schedules.

Certainly, the council did not forget the student body. As students sluggishly walked into the building on the first day of school, each found a decorated, over-sized paperclip in his locker. All five dances sponsored by Student Council also proved to be successful, especially Homecoming. The representatives worked diligently to create "A Royal Knight in Klein's Kindom." Other activities held were: three blood drives, computer dating, club convention, powder puff football, Santa pictures, intramural sports, the distribution of turkey dinners to needy families, and an inspirational Camfel production film.

The different committees definitely acted as the council's backbone. For example, the Good Sportsmanship League (GSL) helped promote good rapport between the schools in the district. The new birthday committee was a success, providing each student with a card on his birthday. Without committees, the council would have never reached its goal as a student oriented organization. The Student Council hoped that the upcoming years at Klein would be as promising as this one was for them.

NHS is tops

What is the only organization at Klein, combining academic excellence, school-wide leadership, service, and citizenship? None other than the National Honor Society. Under the direction of sponsors Martin Fannett and Doris Wolff, Honor Society members held key meetings throughout the year to discuss their projects.

Students were selected to be in the society by teacher recommendation and class rank. They served in various capacities including working in the school store, ushering at College Night, and at each open house throughout the year.

Officers of the Society were: David Johnson - president; Spencer Greene - vice president; Robyn Davenport - secretary; Curt Maudlin - treasurer; and Cindy Cowen - historian. They were elected in the spring and were honored at graduation by serving as marshalls for the 1983 class.

Foreign languages broaden horizons

The Foreign Language Department strived to build a stronger group of students interested in furthering their knowledge of the country they were studying. The key to doing so was participation. The German, French and Spanish Clubs all had plans which were put into action starting in September with the Pot Luck Supper. Further in the year, the department held the annual Christmas Party. In February, students prepared for competitive events in the Foreign Language Festival.

The German Club kept its interests directed towards Germany. This year marked the celebration of Germans in America. The club attended the Renaissance Festival and held several parties of their own including a German "Fasching" Party. The club also went Christmas caroling to early German Settlers' homes here in the Klein area. The year ended with the Annual Spring Trip and Awards Banquet.

The French Club was pointed towards France. The French Club also held several parties which included cheese and pastry tasting parties. Members competed in the national French Contest and French Symposium. French films and guest speakers kept students interested during class.

Spanish Club members kept their minds south of the border. Students studied Spanish culture and background. They competed in several soccer games against other clubs. The club held several parties including a Halloween party. Members also had a chance to see a mexican bullfight.

Caring through speech

As a community service project the Speech Club spent many hours recording English literature tapes to be used by the visually handicapped students attending school in the Klein district. Over the year the Speech Club compiled a vast library of tapes that would benefit students for many years to come.

The club spent a busy year attending city wide speech tournaments as well as hosting a high school tournament in November and an intermediate level tournament in February.

Points were obtained through different degrees of merit and by placing in the tournaments. These points decided whether a school could send a representative to the National Forensic competition. The honor of competing at the national level was the primary goal of the speech squad.

Spotlight shines on drama students

Whether on stage rehearsing lines or backstage building sets, everyone was kept busy in the Drama Department. The Thespians were a group of honored students who stood out in their field. The Drama Club consisted of a group of devoted students who helped build sets, run the lightbox, and learn the techniques of the theatre.

The Drama Department provided Klein with several productions. The first was a comedy called You Can't Take It With You. The next was called Look Homeward Angel. In the latter part of the year was the all-school musical. Several smaller productions were put on by the drama classes. They included a dinner theatre and a play called Dark Of The Moon. Drama students did well in competitive fields. They attended speech tournaments in which several qualified for State. The end of the year brought the contest play which earned Klein a high ranking.

Key up to the Kats

Key Club is a community service organization that promotes school unity and community awareness.

The Key Club sponsored many activities to promote school spirit and involvement; one of these activities was a male beauty contest.

Key Club strived to build a tradition of strong organizations for Klein's future. This year the club was involved more than ever before. Klein's Key Club also sponsored a carwash and raised a tremendous amount of money.

The Klein 1983-84 Key Club officers were as follows: President, Sharon Christian; Vice President, Kim Carlisle; Treasurer, Jim Guarino; Corresponding Secretary, Betsy Frank; Parliamentarian, Lisa Nathanson.

Quill and Scroll unites staffs

Yearbook and Newspaper Staff had a chance to work together through Quill & Scroll. To be in Quill & Scroll one must have been on staff for at least two years.

The club sponsored a current events quiz in which the senior with the top score had a chance to compete for a scholarship presented by the club. All of the students enjoyed writing as well as having their finished products read by the student body.

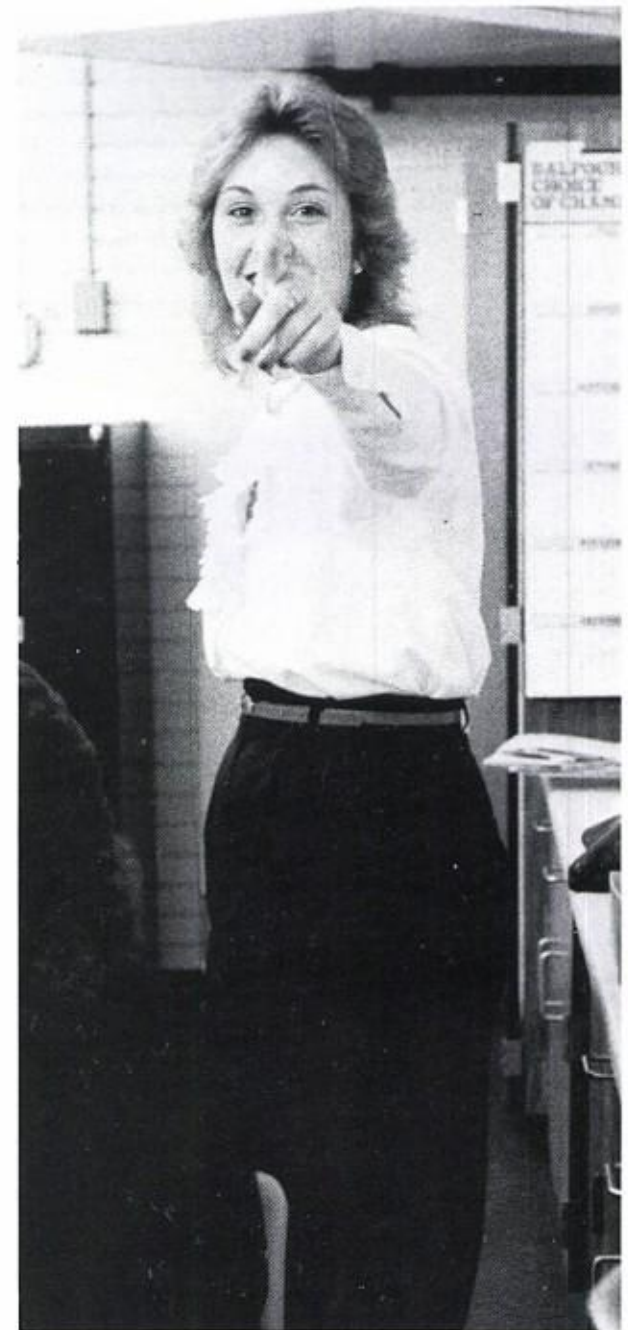

Quill & Scroll members allowed staff members a relief from the anxieties of copy deadlines. The club presented an opportunity to discuss the variety of class activities.

The Quill & Scroll officers were as follows; President, Cara McMahon; Vice President, Bettie McGuinness; Secretary, Lori Lovett; Treasurer, David Johnson; Reporter, Kris Lucksinger.

Bearkat '84 staff strives to "Have It All"

The Klein High School Bearkat has a long history of achieving goals of producing a book that represents each school year and winning numerous awards. In the past years, Klein has won first place in the CSPA, AASB, and THSPA competitions and critiques.

Led by Davelyn Kennedy, this year's staff quickly began writing copy, planning layouts, and forming headlines in order to reach deadline. Near the end of October, Mrs. Kennedy moved to Kentucky. Although she was missed, the yearbook staff was able to carry on its tradition of success. This success was due in part to Sheila Alexander, the former photography coordinator. Alexander accepted the difficult task of being the new adviser.

The Bearkat met fifth period as a class, but extensive amounts of work was to be done before and after school hours. Members of the staff could be seen running about in a frantic state as the deadlines grew nearer. It became all worth it, though, when the completed yearbooks arrived.

The Bearkat may have a long history of success, but this year's staff stood in a class by itself.

Experience behind Chat

The Klein High School newspaper staff consisted of 29 experienced news writers and photographers. They successfully maintained the Bearchat's goal of keeping the student body informed and entertained.

The Bearchat received a long list of awards during the 1983-84 school year. They recently added to that list first place rankings in the AASP, CSPA, and THSAA.

Led by Davelyn Kennedy, adviser and David Johnson, editor, the newspaper staff published monthly issues of newspapers at no cost to students. As editor of the Bearchat, Johnson encouraged each member to perform at his or her best and made the task enjoyable. Kennedy advised the staff in the preparation of the newspaper until October, when she moved. Sheila Alexander took over Kennedy's position of sponsor.

The staff began each month by brainstorming for stories and deciding who would create them. After copies were formed and sent to the printer, all that was left to do was wait. Their experience paid off at the end of each month, when the papers were delivered and read approvingly by the students.

Not only was the Bearchat a group of experienced news writers, but they were also a closely-knit, professional, organization that worked together.

Band performances excite crowds

Dividing the school year into two major parts, band members were continually striving to uphold their excellence from the past, while reaching for the goals which would set standards in the future.

During the first semester, band members were some of the first to begin practice for football game performances, each show bringing phenomenal applause from enthusiastic crowds. The competition with other area marching bands in contests always proved exciting, for again this year, Klein's ratings were superior.

Although the beginning of the second semester marked the end of marching, this year's concert season kept the excitement flowing. As their goal, excellent performances and competition sweepstakes shined before them, each member took it upon himself to practice until reaching perfection.

This year's most exciting trip was to Corpus Christi for the Buccaneer Music Festival. At this time everyone received his reward for hard work and dedication - the joy of performing.

Color guard, Orchestra perform with enthusiasm

Completing its third year in existence, the Color Guard again produced award-winning shows for Friday nights and for competitions as an auxiliary unit of the marching band. Under the leadership of Rifle Captain, Kim Martin; Co-Captain, Jenny Frey; Flag Captain Marsha Minnich; and Co-Captain Debbie Kirsh, the guard danced and twirled to numerous tunes including In the Stone and Modern Love. Working Monday through Thursday after school with the band and during sixth period every day, the group practiced its routines to perfection knowing that perseverance would lead to eventual excellence.

Striving to uphold the quality of excellence set by Klein orchestras of the past, this year's orchestra proved to be one of the best ever. Under the direction of Liz Picone, the musicians were always eager to perform new music for the enthusiastic audiences who always rewarded them with ovations. The orchestra again travelled to several contests, including the Buccaneer Music Festival, using the aid of the Band and Orchestra Booster Club. Together, the two organizations successfully financed many activities for Klein's music students.

Choir students were "Musically InKleined"

Under the direction of Sampy Wall and David Hill, the three Klein choirs had a very successful year. The Klein choirs were the Chorale, which consisted of juniors and seniors, the A Capella Choir, made up of freshmen and sophomores, and the Girls Ensemble, made up of junior and senior girls.

The year began with All-District tryouts. Many students chosen moved on to Regional and State Competition Levels. The Choirs performed three concerts this year. They held a fall concert, a Christmas concert which included "The Many Moods of Christmas" and a spring concert.

Besides all the rehearsal, the choirs took time out to have Halloween and Christmas parties. As the year neared an end, students had a chance to letter at Solo and Ensemble. All three choirs competed at UIL Contest and did well. The year closed with a spring trip and awards banquet.

Chorale officers were Abel Garcia, president; Cindi Burkey, vice-president; Bret Countryman, treasurer; Kim Postma and Neil Lafayye, historians. A Capella officers were Chris Ebbler, president; Doug Maudlin, vice-president; Carolyn Christian, secretary; Monica Mills, treasurer, historian, and publicity.

Cheerleaders, mascot spark vigor in crowds

Cheerleaders sparked vigor and enthusiasm into the student body with their hard work and determination. Fans could see them at pep rallies, football and basketball games, and in the halls creating spirit throughout the school. Led by varsity/junior varsity sponsor Stephanie Stalder, and by Freshman sponsor Lynn Vander Straten, cheerleaders put forth a team effort which resulted in many outstanding awards.

During the summer, all squads traveled to camps held by the National Cheerleading Association (NCA). Varsity Cheerleaders won three first place trophies in cheer competitions and pom pon division. Individual winners were Tami Speetzen, Kristin Hendricks, Jamie Earnest and Meg Keiser. The Varsity squad also placed second in Joske's Back-to-School Cheerleading Competition.

Junior Varsity Cheerleaders were chosen to compete with five varsity squads for the Award of Excellence, a first in NCA history. The JV squad placed second in high school division at the annual KISD clinic. For the first time, freshman cheerleaders attended summer camp at Sam Houston State University.

Also for the first time in Bearkat history, Klein had a male mascot, Jim Guarino. The Bearkat roamed the stadium crowds and promoted spirit throughout the audience.

Cheerleaders and mascot together introduced many innovative techniques which captivated audiences throughout the season.

Dance team creates new sensation

With a new updated style of dancing and a new title of Dance Team, Bearkadettes pranced onto the field with style. Led by officers: Major, Paula Dooley; Captains, Bryn Barlow, Kristin Harbeck, and Lynn Thompson; Lieutenants, Tracy Bounds, Natalie Hedblom, and Lisa Hill; Top Sergeants, Jill Letcher, Debbie Bruce, and Susan Tyler, the Bearkadettes choreographed sensational performances at sporting events throughout the year.

Many changes occurred at the beginning of the year, the most prominent of these changes being a new constitution. The Bearkadettes showed their versatility in their ability to make the changes so easily. Their efforts and achievements have been noticed because of high standards and determination.

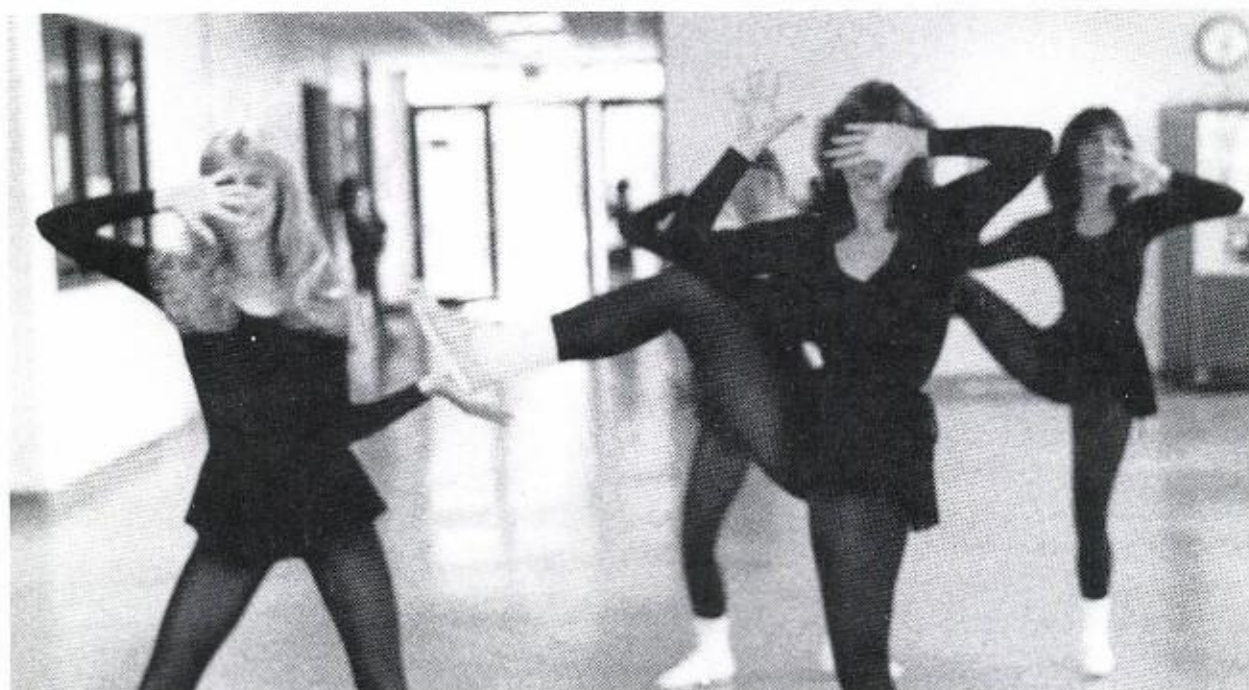

From dancing on jungle gyms to waving patriotic flags, the Bearkadettes brought liveliness and creativity to many school activities.

KAOS, Standleaders rock student body

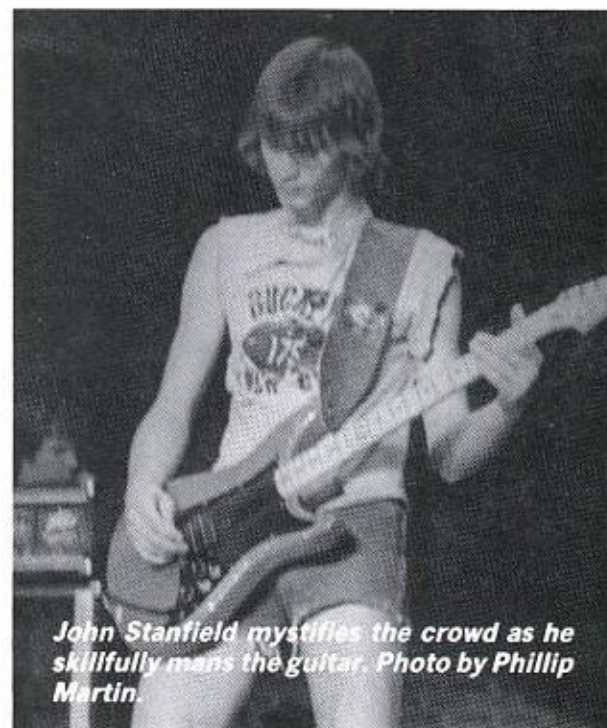

Klein Association of Sound was an organization for talented musicians who wanted to channel their talent to benefit Klein High School. Gathering together as a club meant exchanging musical ideas, reviewing rock music news, and planning for the Klein Jam. The Klein Jam was the club's main fund raiser for the year. In the spring they organized a rock concert where each of the bands played a set demonstrating their musical ability to the student body. The proceeds from the concert were used to renovate the auditorium sound system.

The officers who organized KAOS were: President, John Shoosmith; Vice President, Kyle Howard; Secretary, Nancy Gould; Treasurer, Mike Sakers; Historian, Rae Forbish; and Equipment/Stage Manager, Tony Lynch. Wayland Kidd was the club's sponsor. Certainly the involvement and enthusiasm of each member produced a successful 1983-84 year for KAOS.

Bright yellow shirts with the word "Standleaders" printed on the back were a common sight at Friday night football games. One could see the Standleaders moving about and assisting the cheerleaders by encouraging students in the stands to participate in the cheers. By watching the involvement of the members and the response from the student body, it was difficult for one to believe that Standleaders were only a second year club. Designing vivid colored posters with sayings such as "Mash the Eagles" and "Tame the Cougars", was one of the duties for each member.

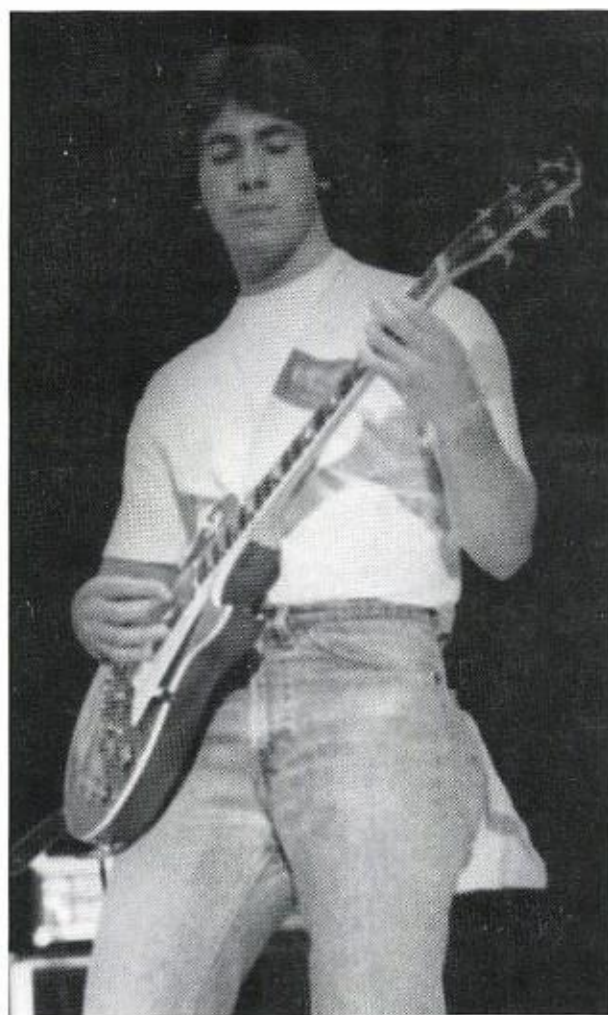

The officers for the 1983-84 year were as follows: President, Chuck Schulze; Vice President, Ashley Lang; Secretary, Karen Valillee; Treasurer, Mike Harper. Tony Guillot and Leslie Vela were the club's sponsors. The enthusiasm and spirit sparked by the Standleaders definitely affected the lower classmen. The club inspired them; juniors, sophomores, as well as freshmen wanted to be seniors so that they could become dedicated Standleaders.

Jets aim for excellence

Mu Alpha Theta/Jets was an organization for students interested in the fields of mathematics and engineering. Activities included attending and hosting math and science competitions. The club brought math and engineering related speakers to Klein. The group presented a scholarship to an outstanding senior in the club.

The team and individual competition this year was outstanding. The Mu Alpha Theta/Jets took overall places at State Jets conferences and Texas State Math League competitions. Other projects for the students consisted of math tournaments for extra credit points.

The two new sponsors for the year were Janet Buxkemper and Mark Hammerbacher. This year's officers were: President, Spencer Greene and Eric Wingfield; Vice President, Lori Thompson, Stan Gustas, and Betsy Moore; Treasurer, Tom Bauchspes; Secretary, Kathy Jones.

Doctors prepare for future

The Medical Career Club prepared students for a future in medicine. The club goals this year were to expose students to as many fields of medicine as possible. This was the first time that the club had a fund raiser project for transportation costs.

The sponsor Bev Schard lead these future doctors on tours through hospitals and other medical facilities. One of their tours included observing open-heart surgery. This tour was reserved for only sixteen students. The officers for the year were: President, Julie Baechle; Vice President, David Johnson; Secretary, Charmayne Shallow; Treasurer, Denise Baas; Reporter, Gemili Abenajar.

Art Club adds a touch of class

The Art Club was a close-knit group of talented young artists who expressed, created and crafted throughout the year. Headed by Annola Lancaster, they participated in several shows and displays. The officers for the club were elected early in the year and began work right away. They were as follows: President, Susan Shaeff; Vice president, Jeff Munger and Mark Kraft; Secretary, Emily Seay; Social Chairman, Nora Colomb; Publicity Chairman, Stacey Lankford; and Treasurer, Mike Kozlowski.

The club received much recognition for the fabulous work done on the huge Texas and American flags used in several of the half-time shows. They were invited to several area high schools to present their flags and also to Texas Christian University for displays.

Throughout the year, Art Club members were involved in many social events. They held a banquet at the Windmill Dinner Theatre, holiday parties and occasional get-togethers.

These talented artists not only enjoyed their year at Klein, but also made it enjoyable for all of the Bearkats with their bright displays.

Bearkats for Christ, STARS enlightened

Every Thursday morning at 6:45, the freshman cafeteria became the meeting place for a group of students eager to learn more about Christianity and themselves. They called themselves Bearkats for Christ. The group enjoyed hearing a variety of guest speakers and attending activities such as Christian concerts, picnics, and weekend retreats.

The slate of officers included: Co-Presidents, Cheryl Cabaniss and Joe Langford; Secretary, Kristi Bainter; and Treasurer, Monty Whatley. The sponsors were Eldon Faries, Connie McMahon, and Kay Lynn Moran.

The STARS shined brighter than ever before. Super Teens Aiding Resource Students was an organization which helped to provide a social life for the developmental students. The club met once a month to plan the month's activity and to discuss upcoming events. STARS activities included attending a football game, holiday parties, and the Special Olympics.

The STARS officers were: Presidents, Ida Palomino and Dayna Troutman; Secretary, Debbie Petrakos; Treasurer, Michelle Doyle; and Historian, Deb Ing. The club's sponsors were Barbara Parsons and Helen Burns.

Clubs for the active

Students of Klein are always looking for something to take up some of their extra time. Science fiction, science, chess, and bowling provide interesting and fun activities in which students can take part.

Members of the Science Fiction Club enjoyed watching video movies after school. As a group, the club also went to weekend movies and attended a banquet at the end of the year to elect new officers and give merit awards. Officers were as follows: President, Tammy Vaughn; Vice President Joe Depeu.

Students involved in Science Club participated in a variety of activities. Members competed in the Texas Junior Academy of Science and selected math and science contests. Students also enjoyed field trips, including an end-of-school trip to Astroworld. Officers were as follows: President, Enver Mullin; Vice President, Jeff Murrell; Secretary, Kathleen Jones; Treasurer, Pam Johnston; Reporter, Laura Christman.

Chess Club met on Thursday and had tournaments and workshops on Saturday. The club also represented Klein High School at tournaments and contests held at other schools. Officers were as follows: President, Dan McCooey; Vice President, Matt Bowman; Treasurer, Garry Smith; and Secretary, Paul Revilla.

Every Thursday the Bowling Club gathered at Diamond Bowl to improve skills and to compete with other students. The club also attended tournaments involving other bowling clubs from different schools. Mechanics master skill of repairing engines

Under the leadership of Carl Mize, members involved in auto mechanics could work on cars brought in by the faculty and other students at a minimal cost. Members mastered everything from tuneups and brake jobs to overhauling engines. Students were also given the opportunity to participate in local contests that could possibly lead to a national level. By taking the three hour course, students developed leadership qualities and a better understanding of cars and other vehicles. Class members also attended the vocational picnic and a yearend barbeque. Class officers for Auto Mechanics I were: President, Tim Lewis; Vice President, Troy Terpsta; Reporter, Tim McGuire; Secretary, Doyle Leach; Sergeant-at-Arms, Rowland

Fields; and Treasurer, Scott Foust. Officers for Auto Mechanics II were: President, Curtis Morris; Vice President, James Futch; Secretary, Kevin Fouse; Treasurer, Kevin Jackson; Reporter, Henry Reeves; and Sergeant-at-Arms, Tim Ricker.

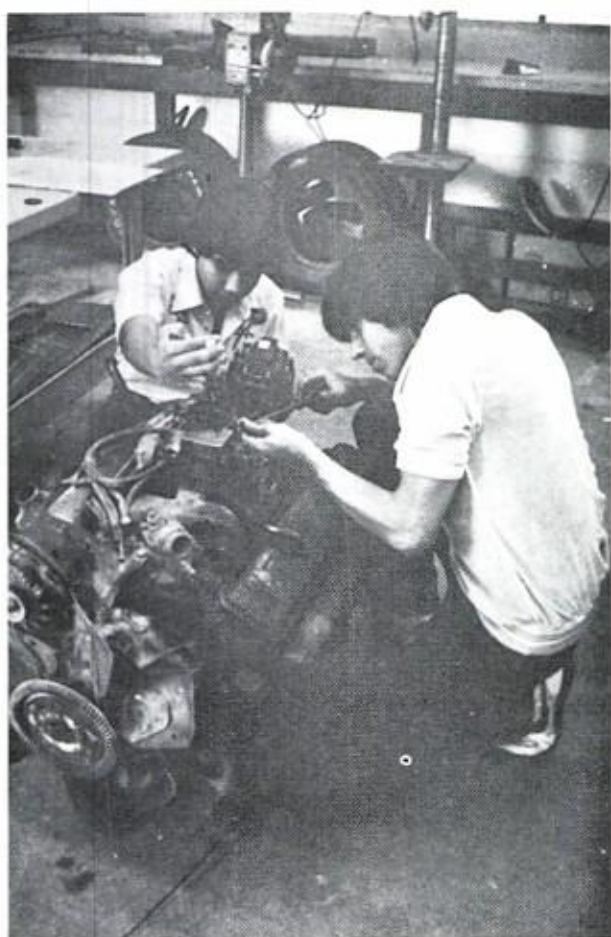

If a student was interested in welding, cutting, sawing, and repairing, then mechanical trades was for them. The class rebuilt and salvaged small engines three hours a day. They also attended contests to demonstrate skills learned in class. Officers were: President, Kelly Davis; Vice President, Lee Hyatt; Secretary, Mark Carry; Treasurer, Kelvin Edwards; Reporter, Timothy Simm; Sergeant-at-Arms, David Williams; and Parliamentarian, Matthew Morgan.

Bass Club hooks a successful year

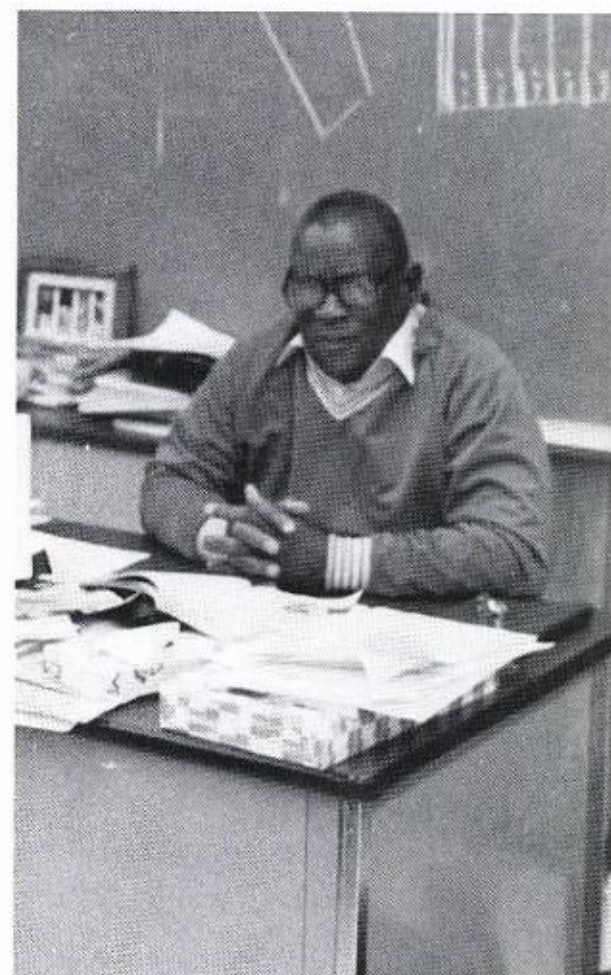

The Klein Bass Club, sponsored by Coach Herb Allen, represented our school throughout the year. The club increased the number of tournaments entered. Assisting Coach Allen in sponsorship were Coach Charles Collins and Coach Richard Perkins. The officers, elected early in the year, were as follows: President, Jeff Murrell; Vice President, Charlie Trojanowski; Secretary, Bill Cook; and Treasurer, David Dillard.

Bass Club members competed in several fishing tournaments throughout the city and returned having placed highly in many areas. Honors and prizes were awarded according to weight-in contests of the fish that the members caught. The main event for the club this year was a delightful "End of School Fish Fry." Thanks guys, for reeling in another great year for the Bearkats.

The Wilderness Club, in its second year of existence, found an uphill battle to the top. Cathy Kosis, club President, was the primary motivator behind getting the club in full gear, according to sponsor, Robert Mosier. Also helping to sponsor the club was Shelley Morrison.

Members went on an adventure every month. Taking hikes anywhere from five to seventeen miles, the members fulfilled their passion for the great outdoors. The main outing of the year was a trip to New Braunfels during spring break, where the members had the opportunity to hike and tube for three fun-filled days. The members also experienced rappelling for the first time. The sites, being totally primitive, did not offer bathroom or electrical facilities, so one had to really be imaginative to survive.

Mosier felt the Wilderness Club helped to teach the members how to be self-sufficient and more aware of nature and how easily man can harm it. He also mentioned that being a member helped to build self-reliance and self-esteem.

FFA reaps a harvest of activities

The FFA members participated in leadership and judging contests at district, state and area levels. Raising projects were shown at local, county and state livestock shows. In the fall, members participated in the KISD Project Show and the fund-raising Fruit Sale.

Two FFA officers were also elected to hold district offices. Rodney King was elected District V President and Mark Rothwell, also President of the Jr. Brangus Association, was elected as District V Reporter.

The club brought home several first place winnings throughout the year from various livestock shows and contests.

The Klein FFA Banquet was held in May where outstanding and honorary members and their achievements were recognized.

FFA officers for the '83-84 school year were: President, Mark Rothwell; Vice President, Rodney King; Secretary, Karen Russell; Treasurer, Carla Buie; Sentinel, Darren Howton; and Chaplin, Rusty Kaufman. Liz Thoede sponsored the club and felt the main goal was to build confidence and leadership characteristics among the club members.

Horticulture blossoms

Headed by Liz Thoede, the Horticulture Club participated in activities throughout the city and state during the year. The officers for the '83-84 season were: President, Rhonda Carter; Vice President, Karen Russel; Secretary, Lori Turner; Treasurer, Kim Fredregill; and Show Chairperson, Kelly Burch.

The club was responsible for supplying a large number of the football mums for Homecoming, which were sold during lunch periods. They created floral designs for banquets, shows and even birthdays. The club participated in Horticulture Shows at Houston/Harris County Fair and Houston Livestock Show. Also in conjunction with the FFA, they sponsored a practice horticulture contest for those students enrolled in horticulture programs for the handicapped throughout the Harris and Montgomery Counties. The club also took responsibilities in beautifying our campus when they landscaped the areas near the high rise and band hall.

From assisting with prom decorations to preparing the graduation stage, the Horticulture club was in full bloom for the Bearcats.

ICT proves outstanding

The Industrial Cooperative Training Club (I.C.T.) was designed to give students experience in business, leadership and education in the vocational field. Sponsor James Stubblefield felt the club lived up to its great potential.

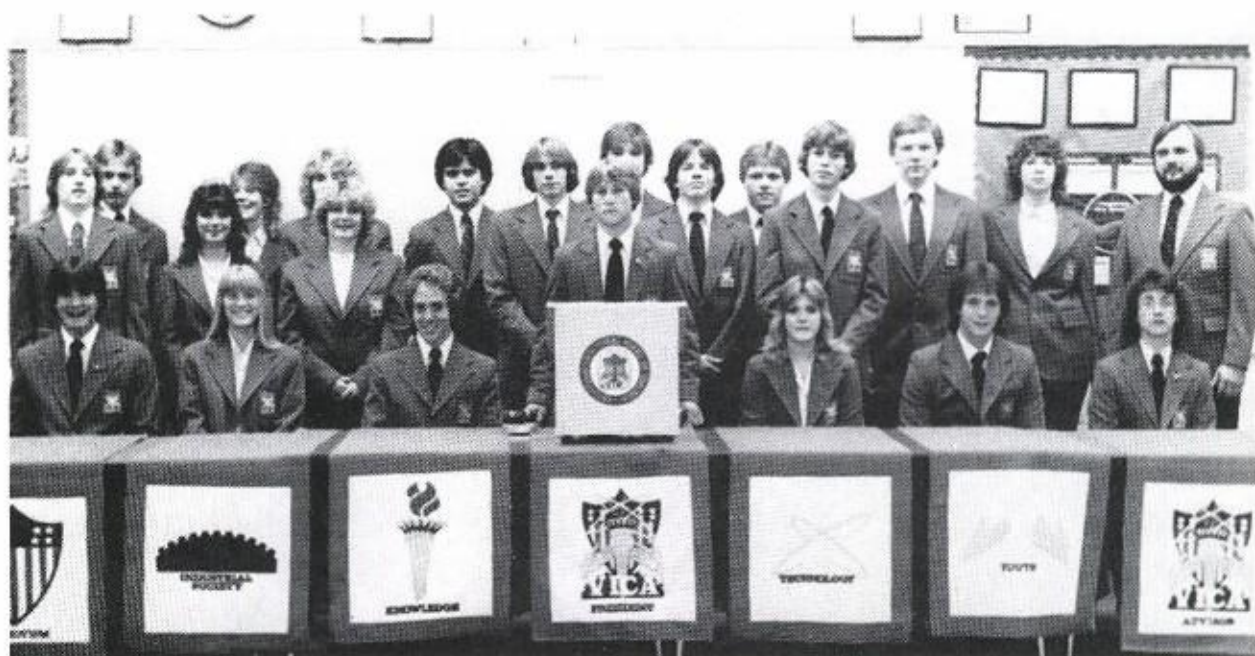

I.C.T. was an integral part of the Vocational Industrial Clubs of America. For the past ten years Klein has had an outstanding chapter in the Houston area. Officers and members were also voted outstanding.

The club was involved in many school and civic activities. It sponsored several activities such as Employer-Employee Banquet, Halloween Party and a Christmas Luncheon.

The club officers for 1983-84 were: President, Damian Prause; Vice President, Danny White; Secretary, Wendy Chasteen; Treasurer, Curtis Miller; Parliamentarian, John James; Reporter, Tonya Wilson; and Club Advisor, Ronnie Oden.

A cut that won't hurt

The new cosmetology teacher, Teresa Reneau, had two classes to work with this year. Her classes were made of juniors and seniors who enjoyed learning and practicing their skills on customers.

The classroom, located in the Career Building, provided a realistic setting in which the girls could learn working skills. The girls practiced on students, mannequins, and fellow classmates. After a year of haircutting, permanents, and manicures all the girls were eligible to take the professional beauticians test in Austin.

New skills acquired

The Office Education Association is a program to teach students secretarial skills. This club is divided into two parts. One is a two-hour lab class while the other is a half-day work program.

The co-op officers were: President, S. Baker; Vice President, D. Stephenson; Secretary, S. Theiss; Treasurer, T. Ruocco; and Reporter, M. Cash. The Lab officers were President, T. Cole; Vice President, C. Oates; Reporter, G. Jones; Historians, C. Torregrossa and C. Christman; and Treasurer, C. Lauda. The sponsors were Vicki Avery and Carol Goedeke.

Some of the events sponsored by OEA were candy sales, a Thanksgiving charity drive, Toys for Tots drive, and end-of-the-year banquets. This was also the first year that Klein's OEA sponsored the district competition.

Among the trades learned by the Construction Trades Club were carpentry, masonry, and electric wiring. The club also aided in the construction of props needed by other clubs. The club held a Christmas party and an end-of-the-year party. Club officers were: President, D. Pennington; Vice President, P. Nichols; Parliamentarian, E. Morgan; Reporter, M. Surbrook; Treasurer, C. Sharpe; Secretary, G. Begg, and Sergeant-at-Arms, B. Perez. The club was sponsored by Robert Foley.

Students master fine line

This year the Drafting Club kept busy with its involvement in school. At Open House the officers escorted the visiting parents. The workers also worked outside of class representing our school in competition. They attended the state regional, the Woman's Auxiliary architectural Design Competition, and the Texas A&M mail-in contest.

For the first time the club had two students on the regional board of office officers. Kim McIntyre was elected president and Kim Kelly was elected secretary.

The Drafting Club also sponsored social events such as an area wide picnic, Christmas Party, and an end of the year banquet.

Acquiring new skills

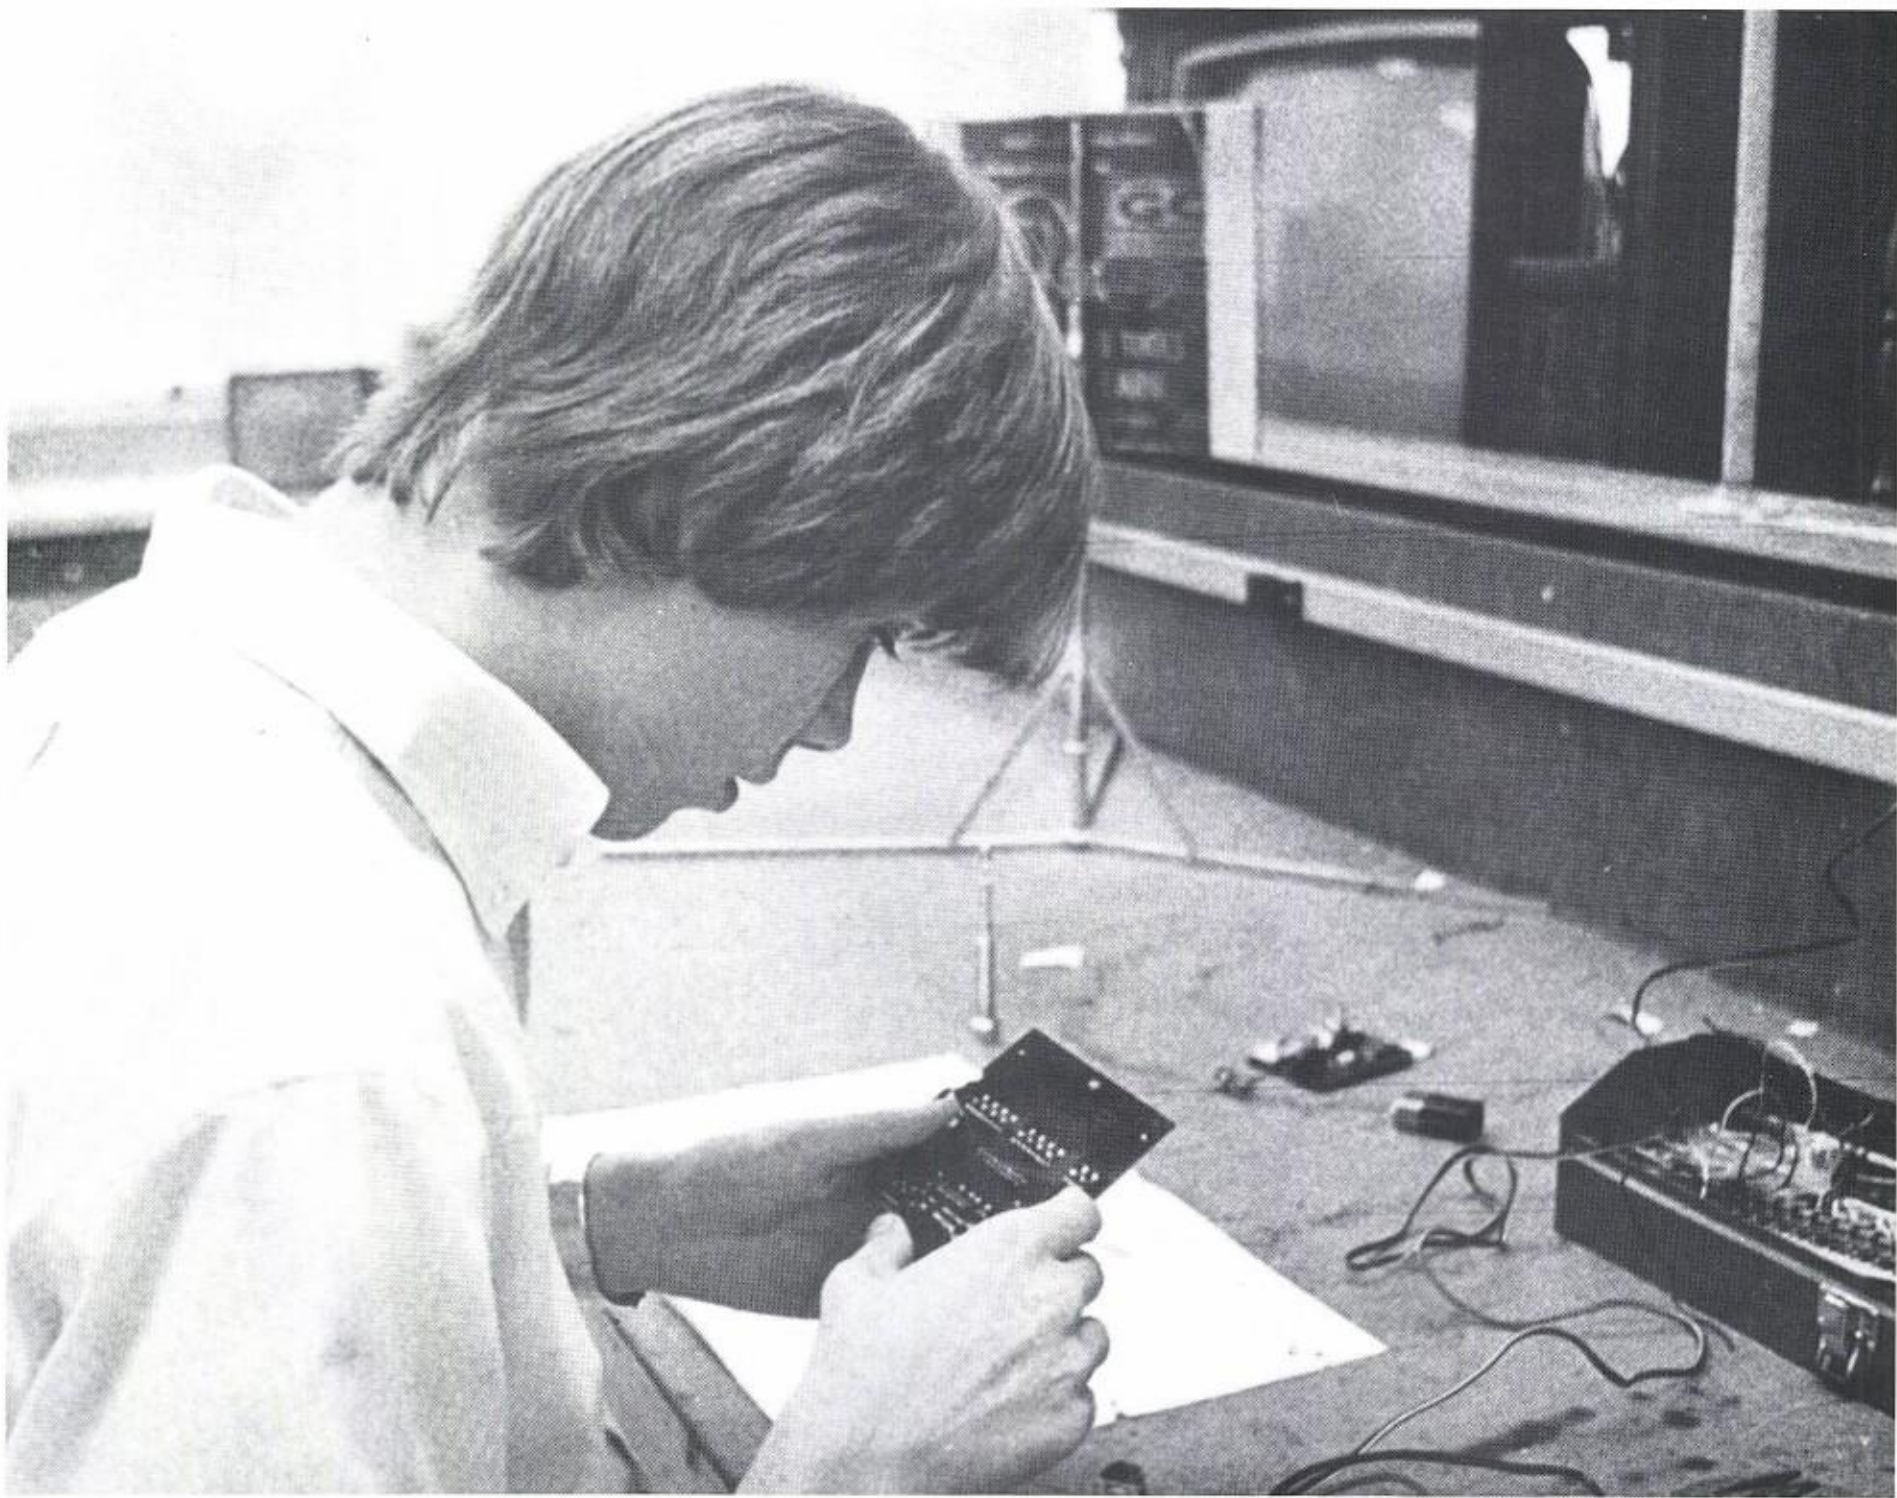

Both the Air Conditioning and Refrigeration Club and the Electronics Club were once again involved in the Vocational Industrial Clubs of America. Students from both of the clubs prepared notebooks and projects for the district and state competitions held in Houston and Fort Worth. They were judged on their skills and the accuracy of their work.

Hildreth Deanne, the Electronics Club sponsor, taught students how to build various electronic instruments, such as power supplies, radios, and testers. The club's class project involved building a Heathkit Robot, which the juniors later programmed.

"Hero", as it was called, will be used in school functions and to create interest and attention for the mechanical skills classes in the future.

Lewis Jackson, the Air Conditioning/Refrigeration club sponsor, taught his students to build and repair cooling units and other electrical appliances. Included in these appliances were air conditioners, refrigerators, washers, and dryers. The club's goals were to give students technical training and to promote self satisfaction with their own work.

The classes, during school, were designed to give students on-the-job training and a new career skill.

Future entrepreneurs

Students involved in DECA gained a great deal of knowledge in preparation for entering the business world with the help of sponsors Bill Briggs and Michelle Burns.

DECA was responsible for running the student store and attending a variety of business oriented conferences. They also participated in many contests at which the members competed with other DECA chapters in different areas of the business field. The contests were grouped in local, state, and national levels. Some of the winning students were awarded scholarships to continue their study of the business world.

DECA held many social events throughout the course of the year. The main events were a Halloween and a Christmas party, a student picnic and a special employee-employer banquet. This was the largest and most spectacular event which took place at the end of the year. All students and employers gathered for a banquet in which many awards and certificates were given.

New additions

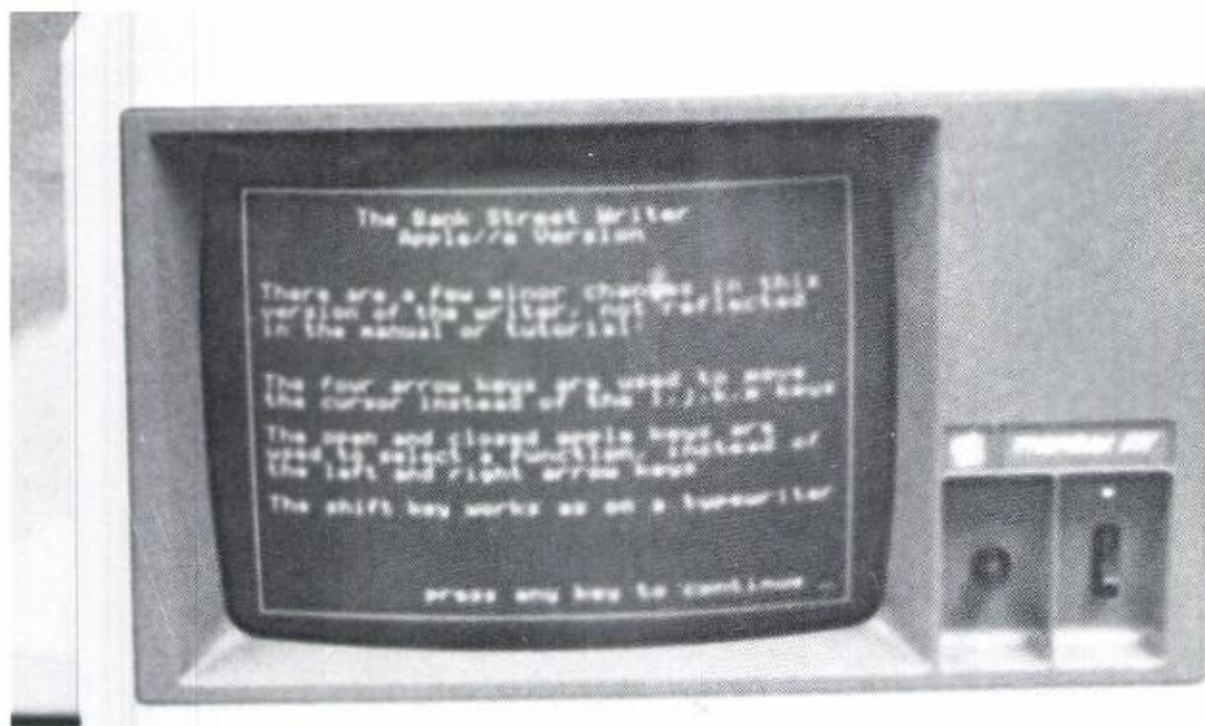

Klein's extra curricular activities consisted of many clubs and organizations. Klein had two new clubs for the students to enjoy. The Business and Computer Clubs were formed to benefit students in future careers.

The Business Club was organized to teach students basic management skills, office procedures and other important aspects of the business world. Included in their activities were field trips to various businesses and hosting many guest speakers.

The Business Club sponsored eight outstanding business students each month selected by sponsors Janita King, Mary Viehoefer, Debra Ross and Chris Hutchison. The students' pictures and a bit of information were displayed on a special bulletin board in the Business Department. Also in the spring a banquet was held to honor the most outstanding business students of the year.

The second club was the Computer Club which was open to all grades and incorporated science and math computer knowledge into the radio and television lab to learn electronic communications.

Many special sessions were held to which guest speakers were invited. Many KHS teachers attended these sessions to obtain a greater knowledge of computers. They also attended several computer math tournaments and special conventions in our area. In addition, they sponsored a games-a-thon where students tried to beat the members' posted scores on selected computer games.

Before and after school, over weekends and during greatfully welcomed holidays, students at Klein spent their time in the midst of friends and took interest in a wide variety of extracurricular activities.

Clubs, organizations, teams and special interest groups were formed and helped students to learn about themselves.

School dances, drama productions and sporting events played a major role in every Bearkat's life. Pride was evident as the tennis team captured state and the varsity football team climbed all the way to the Region Championship Title.

Pastimes such as taking exotic vacations, daring to be the first to display some new fad and thrill-seeking with rare hobbies emphasized student individualism and made life more interesting for everyone.

For many, after-school and weekend jobs were necessary to keep the gas gauge just above the "E" and to provide for Friday and Saturday night fun. Dating, going to parties, attending concerts and going out with friends were highlights of a student's break from school.

Students enjoyed participating in the many activities which were a part of their lives as students at Klein because they could freely express their individuality and creativity. Enthusiasm, imagination and the strong desire to fulfill the role of a successfully active student body were all ingredients in allowing Klein students to have it all.

Student Life

Bearkats “gave their all”

Talent, skill and teamwork were all evident as a partial crowd viewed Klein Varsity Football at its peak. Bearkat victories became a natural and so did the support of an enthusiastic student body.

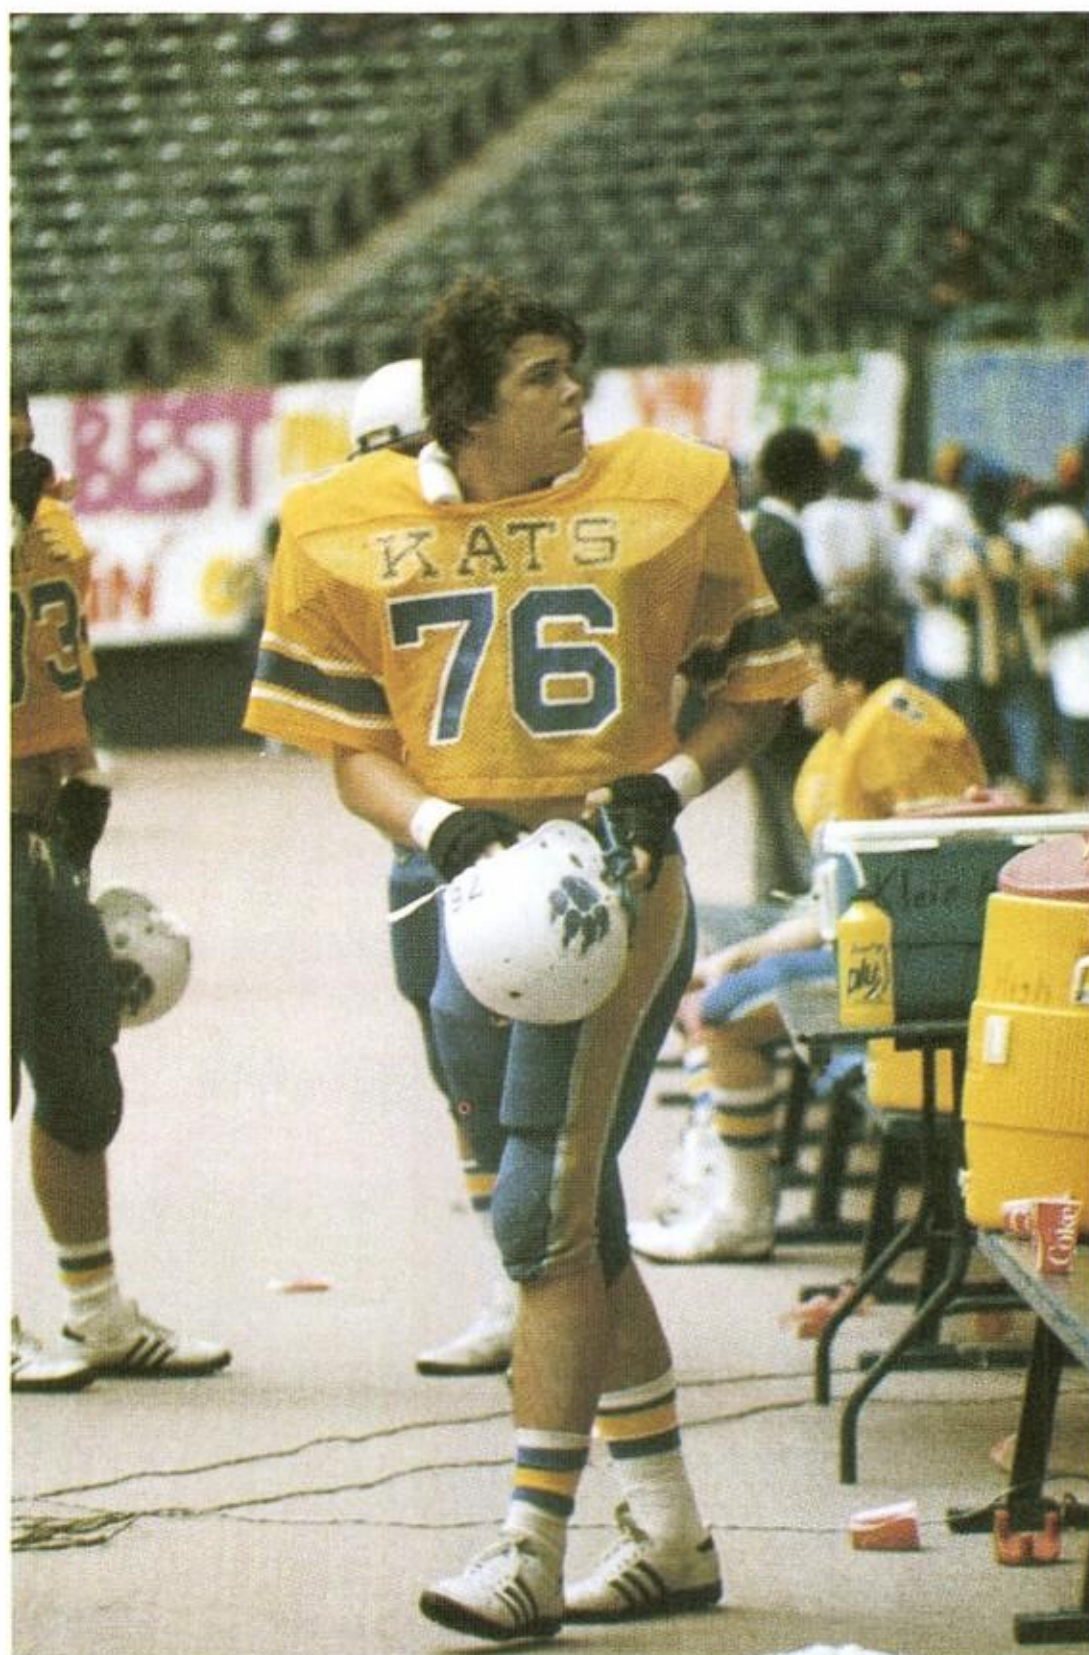

The Bearkats finished their season with a 12-1 record and took District, Bi-District, Area and Regional titles. Texas Stadium in Irving, Texas, hosted play-off games. Klein climbed to the quarter-finals and returned to the home of the Dallas Cowboys for a game against the Plano Wildcats. Only one week earlier, Klein shut out the number one ranked Highland Park for the Regional Title.

These games promoted more spirit than ever before. Backing the team with full support were hundreds of students who traveled by bus to Texas Stadium for two consecutive weeks. The caravan also included the drillteam, band, standleaders and cheerleaders.

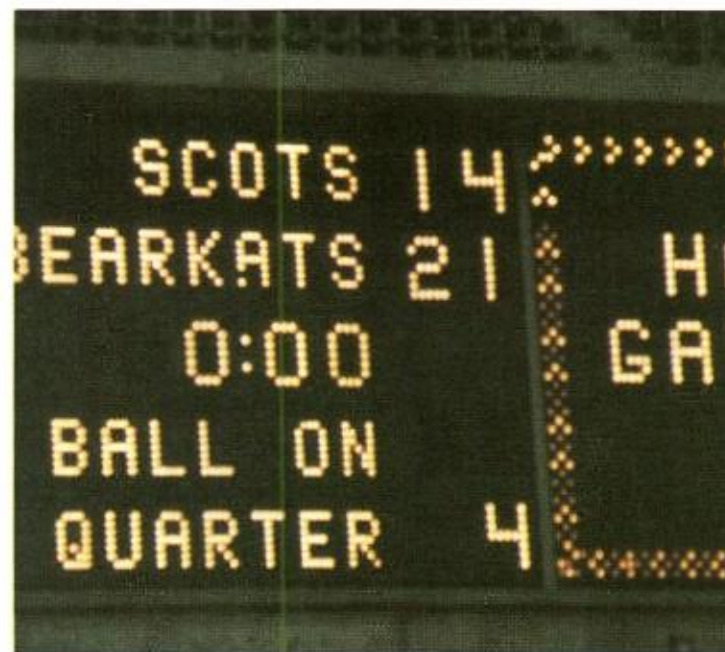

As Texas began to recognize our strength and ability, we began to realize our unity. We joined together and took part in history-making events. Most of all, the team developed their pride and shared it with every student. For many months they had altered their schedules and lifestyle around total commitment to workouts. All of this faith, pride and hours certainly paid off as the Varsity Bearkats proved our identity and our worth.

For some 2:15 was not the end

The last bell rang at 2:15, signalling the dismissal of school, but for many students the day was just beginning. This bell marked the start of a variety of activities which would promote involvement, dedication and a sense of pride. For these students, school became more than just "reading, writing and arithmetic."

Even after dark, students could be found polishing their extracurricular activities to perfection. Students worked with endless commitment of an array of activities. An example of these included football, band and dance team practice, plus drama rehearsals and yearbook and newspaper production. Other students strived toward achieving total student unity by serving on Student Council or working with various school organizations.

A royal knight conquers all

Homecoming: "A Royal Knight in Klein's Kingdom." The spectacular event of course brought the expected specialties but most of all presented some extravagant new traditions. For the first time in several years, the Homecoming Court was chauffeured around the track at half-time in Mustang convertibles. To benefit the students involved in extra-curricular activities surrounding the football game, the dance was changed to Saturday night instead of following the Friday night game to allow the participation of everyone.

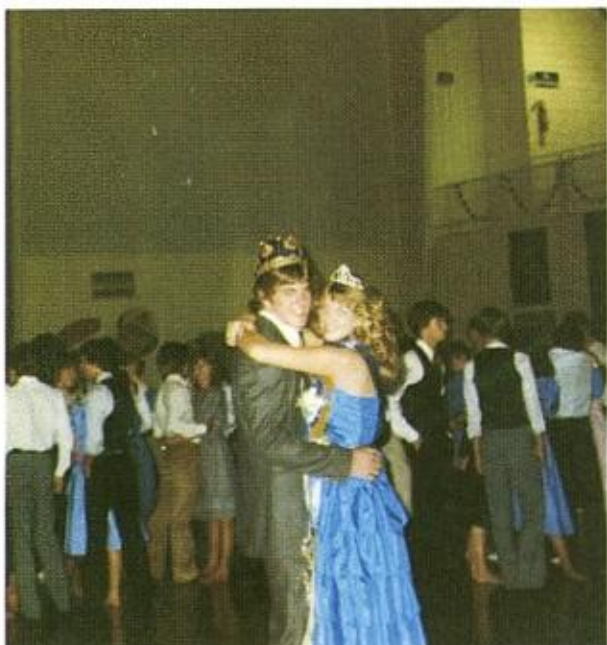

The Bearkats nicked Nimitz with a 31-6 victory, which was an added feature to the excitement of Homecoming. The halftime ceremony set the mood for the entire weekend with outstanding performances by the drill team and band. The Homecoming Court was also recognized. Nominees for King and Queen were Seniors: Cindy Cowen, Paula Dooley, Jamie Earnest, Lori Gantt, Kristin Hendricks, Jill Letcher, Kris Schuler, Mike Dion, Ross Klein, Larry LeBeau, Brian Letbetter, Arne Lindblom, Mike Patrick and Brad Schard.

The Dukes and Duchesses from the Freshman, Sophomore and Junior classes were selected and announced prior to Homecoming. They were as follows: Juniors, Colleen Brennan and Mark Norwood; Sophomores, Terry Davenport and Gary Hayes; and Freshmen, Jill Darbyshire and Chris Schoth.

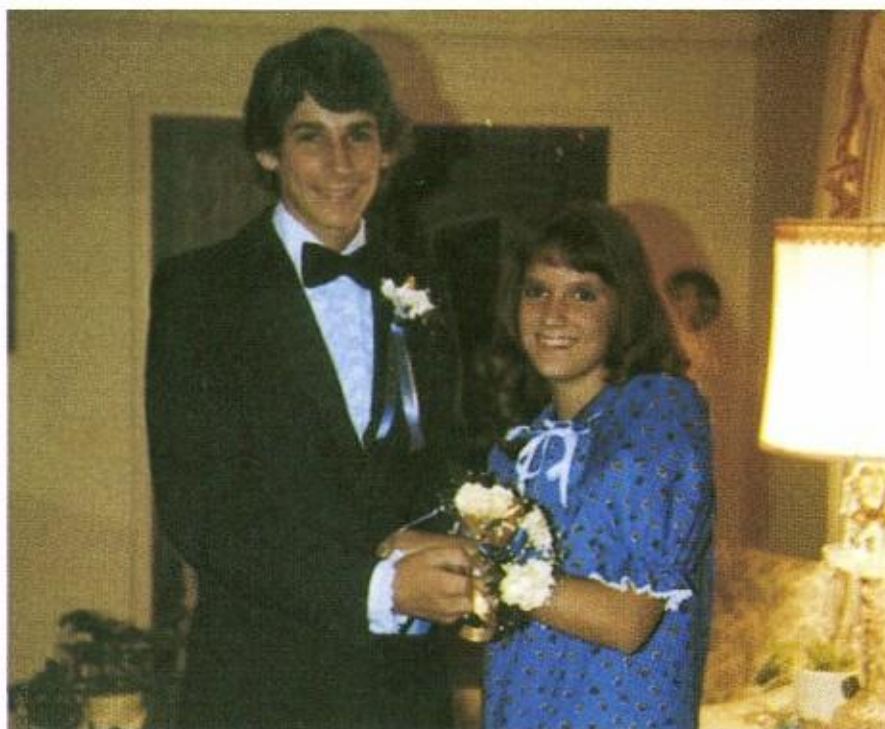

The dance began at 8:00 p.m. and was held in the school gym. The creative decorations were designed by the Student Council and revolved around the theme, "A Royal Knight in Klein's Kingdom." The anxiously awaited selections for Homecoming King and Queen were announced. Cindy Cowen and Ross Klein received the honors. The D.J., Disco America, provided a variety of music to accommodate all tastes of Klein students and helped to entertain and assure the enjoyment of all.

The outcome of Homecoming '83 would be an event to remember and definitely added to the idea that Klein students "had it all."

Outside hobbies spawn interest

Outside of school, students expanded their curriculum and fulfilled their individual interests. This allowed students the opportunity to participate in hobbies that school did not offer.

Water sports were among the favorites. Skiing, scuba-diving, snorkeling and para-sailing were easily accessible because beaches and lakes were not far away. Competition among peers was a necessity for some as they prepared to race, show and present the best they had to offer. Students raised livestock to compete in area shows and trained for marathons and races as well as crafted ideas to present at art displays.

Whatever they did, they did well. Most of all, students proved their ability to themselves and excelled outside of school activities.

Friends, fun and food were all a part of lunch

To eat or not to eat? That was the question many students found they could not answer. The options were numerous. With the library open to ambitious students, one may have had time to jot down some notes for an upcoming biology report or gather sources for a research paper.

There is also that human deficiency we have; hunger. What better way to satisfy that hunger than with one of the many options offered in the school cafeteria? Everyday there was two hot tray lines serving well-balanced meals. Some more willful people were drawn to the salad bar where fresh vegetables, ham, turkey and condiments would together build a nutritious meal. Snack bar foods consisted of hot and cold sandwiches, pizza, desserts, milkshakes and ice-cream. Students on the go could catch a quick snack from the vending machines placed in the commons area.

Lunch time was not only looked upon as a time to eat or a time to study, but also as a time to talk and be with friends. We all needed a break from the books during the day and lunch provided just that, plus a whole lot more.

The working world paid off

A vast majority of Klein students started a new day at 2:15 as they left school to enter the working world. Money has always been of major concern to high school students and more than that, a necessity. Providing transportation, not to mention its upkeep and extracurricular weekend activities created the need for a little extra spending money. Many seniors discovered that planning ahead for college finances was also of major importance.

Jobs varied from bagging groceries at a local store, to working at a fast food chain, to holding a job at a department store. Employers from all types of agencies and services were generous in allowing students the chance to prove themselves.

Keeping up top-notch grades and holding an after school and weekend job was not always simple, yet most managed as they knew they must. As representatives of Klein, students functioned superbly on the job and gained skills and experiences that would help to prepare them for the "real" world.

Neil Wallace, Paul Tisch and Raymond Ortiz wouldn't miss the excitement of a Friday night football game.

Students created many nights to remember

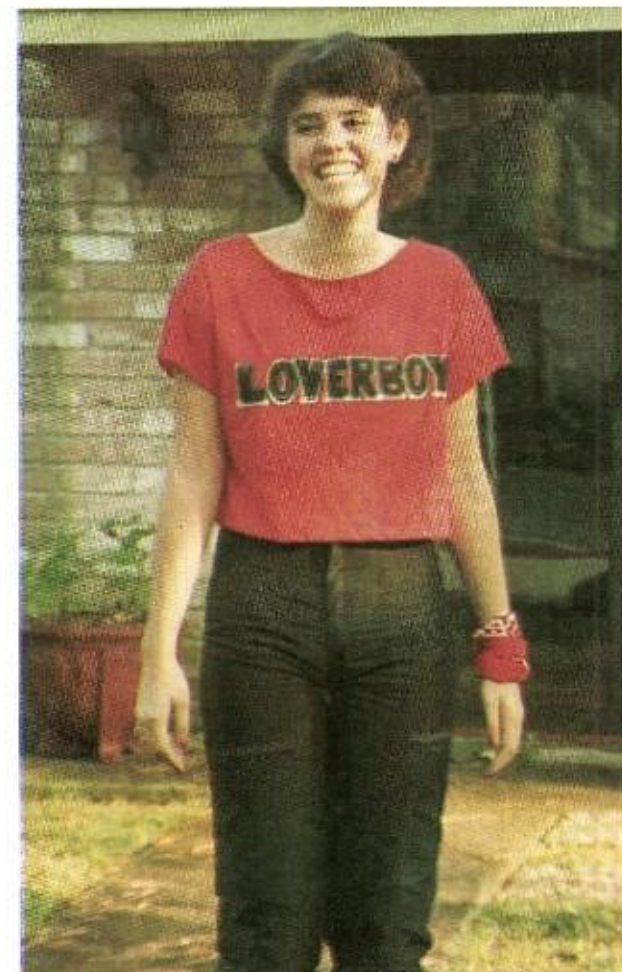

T.G.I.F.: Thank God It's Friday! This phrase encouraged many students to make it through the week. Without the weekend to look forward to, Monday mornings would have been really "dismal."

Students flocked to several places to celebrate the weekend. During football season, Friday nights were usually occupied by attending the varsity football games. Afterwards, Mr. Gatti's was the "hot-spot" where students gathered to satisfy their appetites and rejoice in another Bearkat victory.

"Party, party, party!" exclaimed those students who loved to dance and socialize at someone's house. The crowd could range anywhere from four to 100 people depending on the type of party. Casual dress attire would usually be worn, but some costume parties were organized.

When the football season ended, and the party scene was desolate, the movies were the last resort. Although a student discount card reduced the cost by fifty cents, movie tickets still soaked up at least eight dollars from the guy. To top it off, a soft drink and popcorn were necessities that added to the bill. Afterwards, the couple would often be overcome by hunger pains. To satisfy the craving, the couple would race to McDonald's to conquer their Big Mac attack.

Student relations exceeded peers to include teachers

Teachers, the smiling faces which brighten the classroom, always seem to make life rough with piles of homework on the night of that big date with the person of your dreams. But for many students, teachers were the people who cared enough to make school interesting.

Klein "had it all" and teachers were no exception to the rule. The relationships between students and teachers were as strong as ever. Many students found that one favorite teacher who was willing to sponsor a student club or stay after school to assist one with the many questions created by daily homework assignments.

Teachers used a variety of techniques which required innovation and ingenuity. Some students may have complained at the assignment of a research project, but after all was said and done, the students realized the motive behind the project was not meant to torment the students, but to bring out their creative ability.

However, students could always depend on teachers to add spice to an otherwise monotonous day filled with classrooms and dismissal bells. Sure, classes existed that students literally hated, but everyone had that one class which made the whole day worthwhile.

Punk to Prep . . . fashion's diversity rampant on campus

From the Flashdance craze to the New Wave scene, students were able to create their own style this year. The boundaries were endless. One could wear jeans and a t-shirt and still be considered "in style." The newest addition to fashion this year has been the off-shoulder sweatshirts taken from the movie "Flashdance."

To add to the "no-sock syndrome," as in wearing topsiders, Vans were added to the list. Vans, checkered tennis shoes with no shoelaces, became the newest item for males to wear with jeans.

Parachute pants were also a hit for the guy's scene. As the fad wore on, girls started to wear them too.

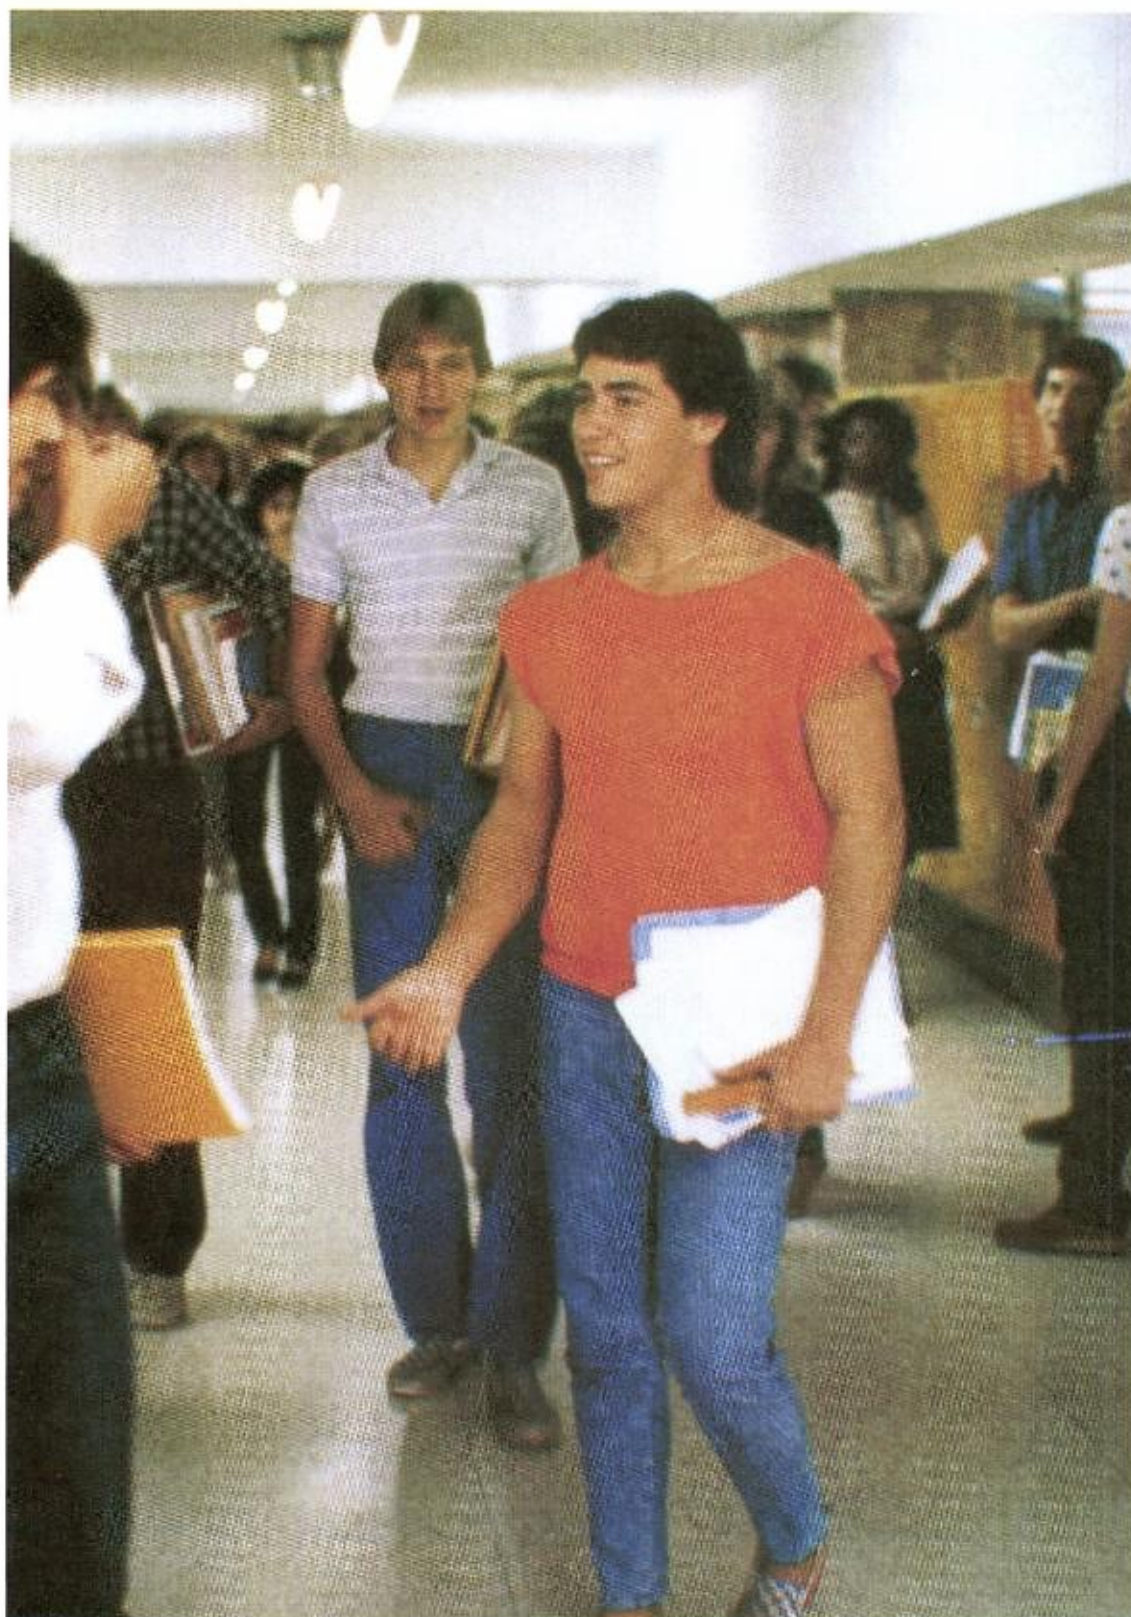

The more "conservative" style was evident, as "preps" carried Gucci bags, button down collars and showed off various plaid and argyle styles.

With courage, New Wave styles appeared in the halls of Klein. Outrageous hair styles, leather pants and boots and extreme jewelry were all a part of expressing a new type of art.

In the way of hair, an individual's chosen style was also linked to their acclaimed clothing style. Page boys and bi-levels were both directed at preppy dress. Some more extreme bi-level cuts were made for New Wave, as hair was so called "punked" on top. The guys also got brave and displayed versatility in GQ and New Wave styles.

Regardless of the style or fashion students at Klein proved themselves as trendsetters.

Vacation spots awed students and families

School holidays were often geared towards vacations, and many students and their families took advantage of this wonderful opportunity. Spring break and Christmas holidays often encouraged an adventure into the Colorado mountains where skiing was a lifestyle. Some popular ski basins were Breckenridge, Vail, Keystone and Winterpark.

Impatient for the "golden" look, many people traveled further south to the Carribean Islands to enjoy an increased climate and a tropical atmosphere.

Summertime gave families more time to schedule vacations and often instigated trips further away than most. Canada, Hawaii and Mexico were all visited by Klein students where various culture interests could develop. A select few were able to travel to various countries in Europe.

Klein students received a taste of the world and a memorable time for all. Getting away was a fantastic change as individuals were awed by wonders of the earth, but getting back to the place they called home and to the comfort of a daily routine was almost as nice.

Besides having it all, when it came to people, Klein had the best. Most evident were the nearly 3000 students in attendance giving Klein style, class and charisma. Ranging from 14 to 19 years old, freshmen, sophomores, juniors and seniors formed a student body which worked to preserve a tradition of pride, participation, honor and preparation.

Working closely with the students was Klein's 159 member faculty. Teachers were professionals in their fields of study and therefore provided comprehensive learning for students. A staff of counselors, librarians, secretaries and aides put forth their greatest efforts every day to make school a pleasant experience for everyone.

Administrators worked for the best interest of all students, enforcing all rules and regulations. The administration also scheduled interesting and special events to enhance learning and enrich student life. Principal Ken Laird worked with three associate principals and five assistant principals to facilitate student activities.

Superintendent Dr. Don Collins and a Board of Trustees formulated a curriculum program that would benefit every student.

With everyone's thoughts aimed toward a sound educational experience, Klein's people gave it their all and succeeded with flying colors.

Bearkat Editor

Kris Lucksinger

Taking full responsibility and committing herself to creating the best Bearkat yearbook ever, Kris Lucksinger put her all behind her staff and their work. Being editor of the yearbook meant time, and whether Lucksinger had it or whether she didn't, she was always there doing more than her share.

Lucksinger was an intriguing person and had some extraordinary interests. She often escaped by riding motorcycles, fishing or hunting. She also enjoyed going out with friends and partaking in spontaneous activities.

Her interest in journalism began in the eighth grade and mounted after her freshman year while serving on the staff. She was asked to be the Advertising Editor her sophomore year. When Lucksinger took on the job with enthusiasm, Davelyn Kennedy began to discover that she had what it took to be an effective editor.

With her decision to graduate a year early, Lucksinger proved her ambition to achieve. Filling her schedule with academic courses and attending summer classes were both necessary for her early graduation and Lucksinger took on this responsibility without a complaint. When asked why she had her mind set on an early graduation, Lucksinger stated, "I was just ready to move ahead."

Sheila Alexander, the yearbook adviser, was impressed with Lucksinger's motivation and concern. She said, when asked her opinion, "Kris was an extremely hard worker and was always striving for a perfect book."

Lucksinger influenced the staff and pushed them to their fullest potential. She said, "When I would tell the staff the way something needed to be done, they did it."

After graduation Lucksinger plans to attend Stephen F. Austin for one year and then on to the University of Texas to study Education and Communications and afterwards become a mother.

To admire her dedication would be inadequate. Lucksinger was an amazing contribution to the yearbook and to our school.

Bearchat Editor

David Johnson

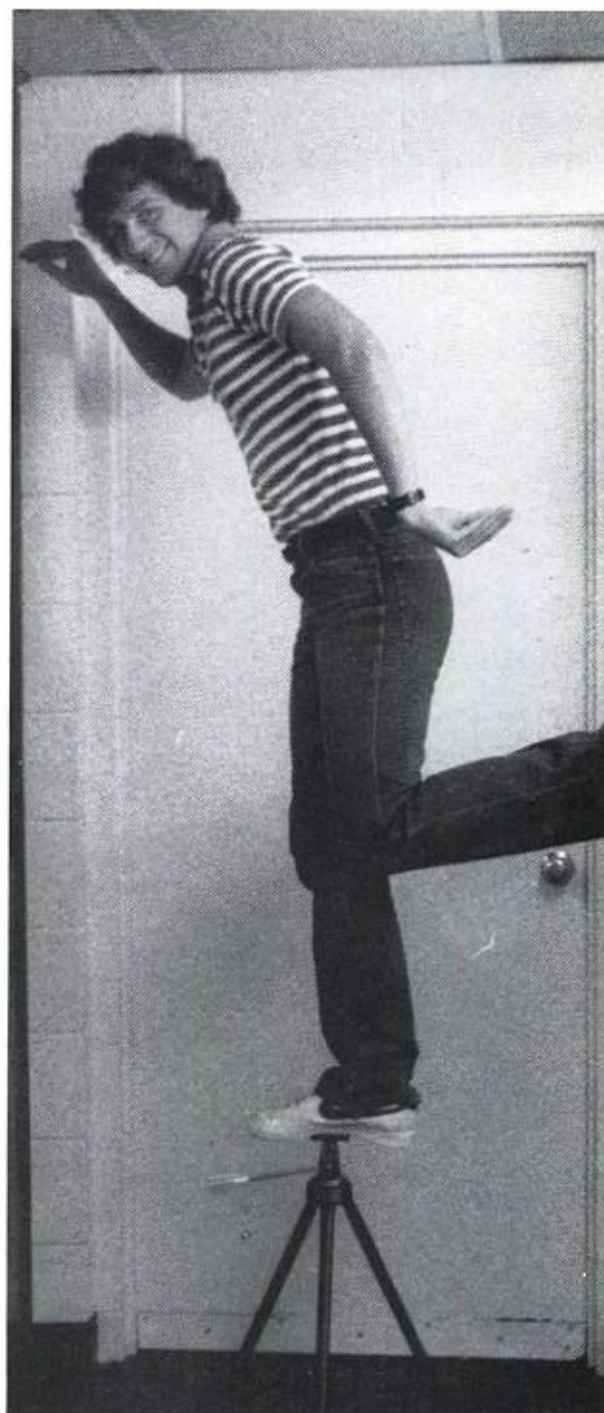

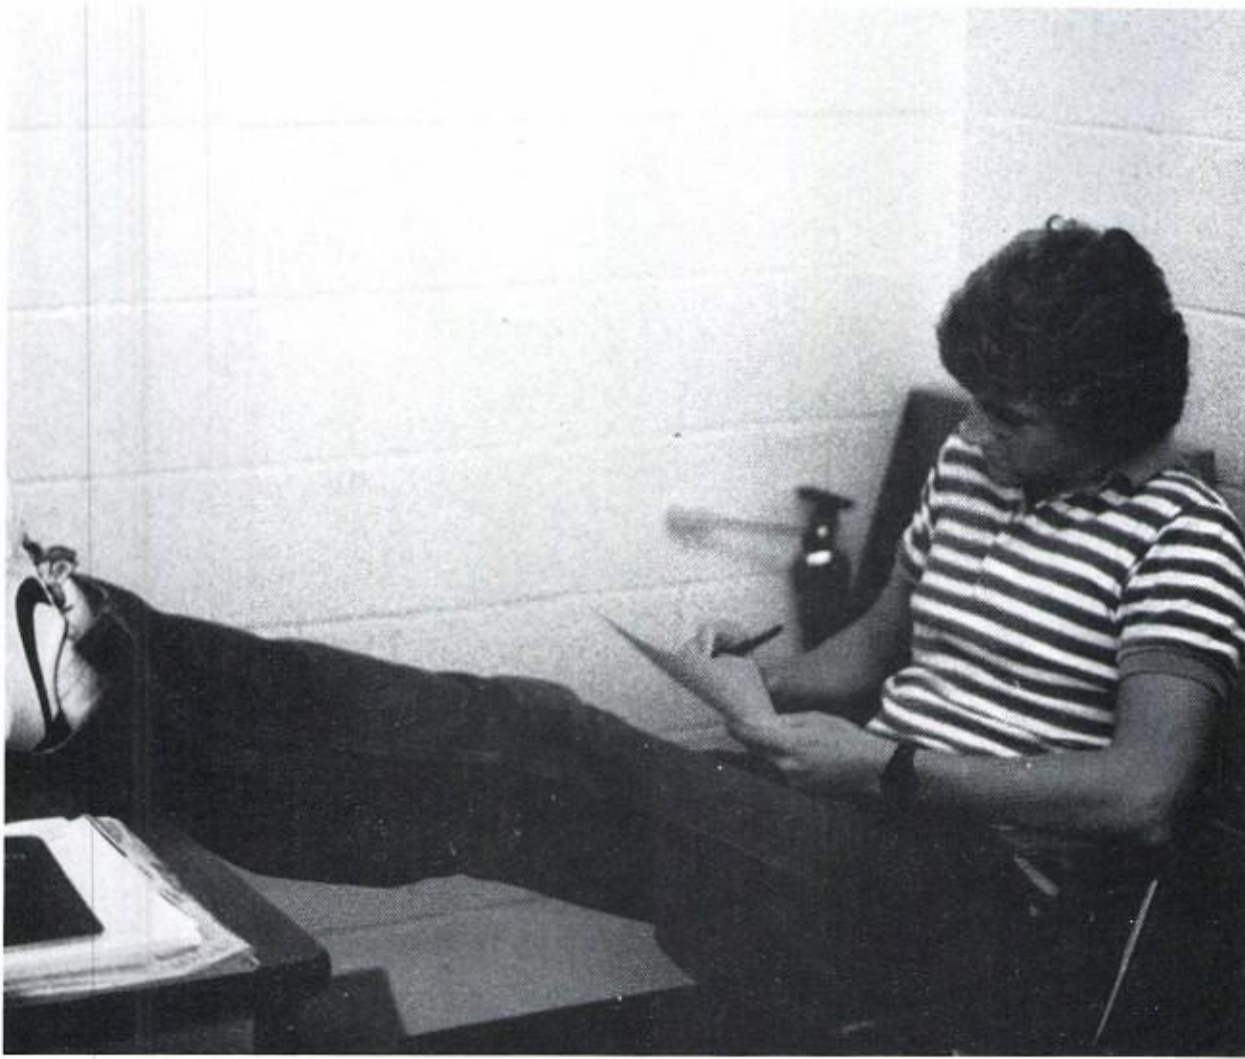

The Klein Bearchat was once again a great success. This was due to a strong willed, dedicated editor, David Johnson. Johnson directed his staff through the year with confidence and outstanding leadership abilities, making the Bearchat a central point of interest for the entire student body. Even at its prime, the ambitious editor was looking for ways to improve his paper. His hard working staff and talented writers, contributed to the overall satisfaction with the paper.

Johnson's congenial attitude allowed him to have a good rapport with his staff, his advisers and friends. In his extra time, he enjoyed movies, dating, swimming and visiting college campuses. After graduation Johnson plans to study pre-med at possibly Baylor or Rice, but he said that his thirst for journalism would always remain.

During high school, Johnson was the Vice President of Medical Careers Club, President of National Honor Society and swam on the swim team for three years. He was a member of Quill and Scroll, and was News Editor for the paper his Junior year. He received an award at a University of Houston Journalism Workshop for being the outstanding contributor.

Johnson felt that Davelyn Kennedy had a wonderful influence on the outcome of the newspaper, due to her highly commendable experience. He said the whole staff would suffer the loss of Mrs. Kennedy with her move to Louisville, Kentucky, but that Sheila Alexander was a more than adequate replacement.

Compliments on the newspaper were welcomed by Johnson and staff. Producing a great paper was common for the Bearchat staff and being successful came natural for David Johnson, as was recognized by all who read the Bearchat.

"None before like the class of '84"

"Having it all." No other words could better describe the class of '84. For them, the time to live was now, and live they did, filling Klein with excitement; giving it life.

The class of '84 struggled through their freshman year, but succeeded with pride. Being the first class ever to occupy the highrise gave them this special feeling. Their sophomore year held a lot for the future class of '84. As they were no longer freshmen, they felt more a part of Klein. Their junior year was more than busy, for they spent their time preparing for the future. Research papers, SAT tests, and college applications were a major part of their year.

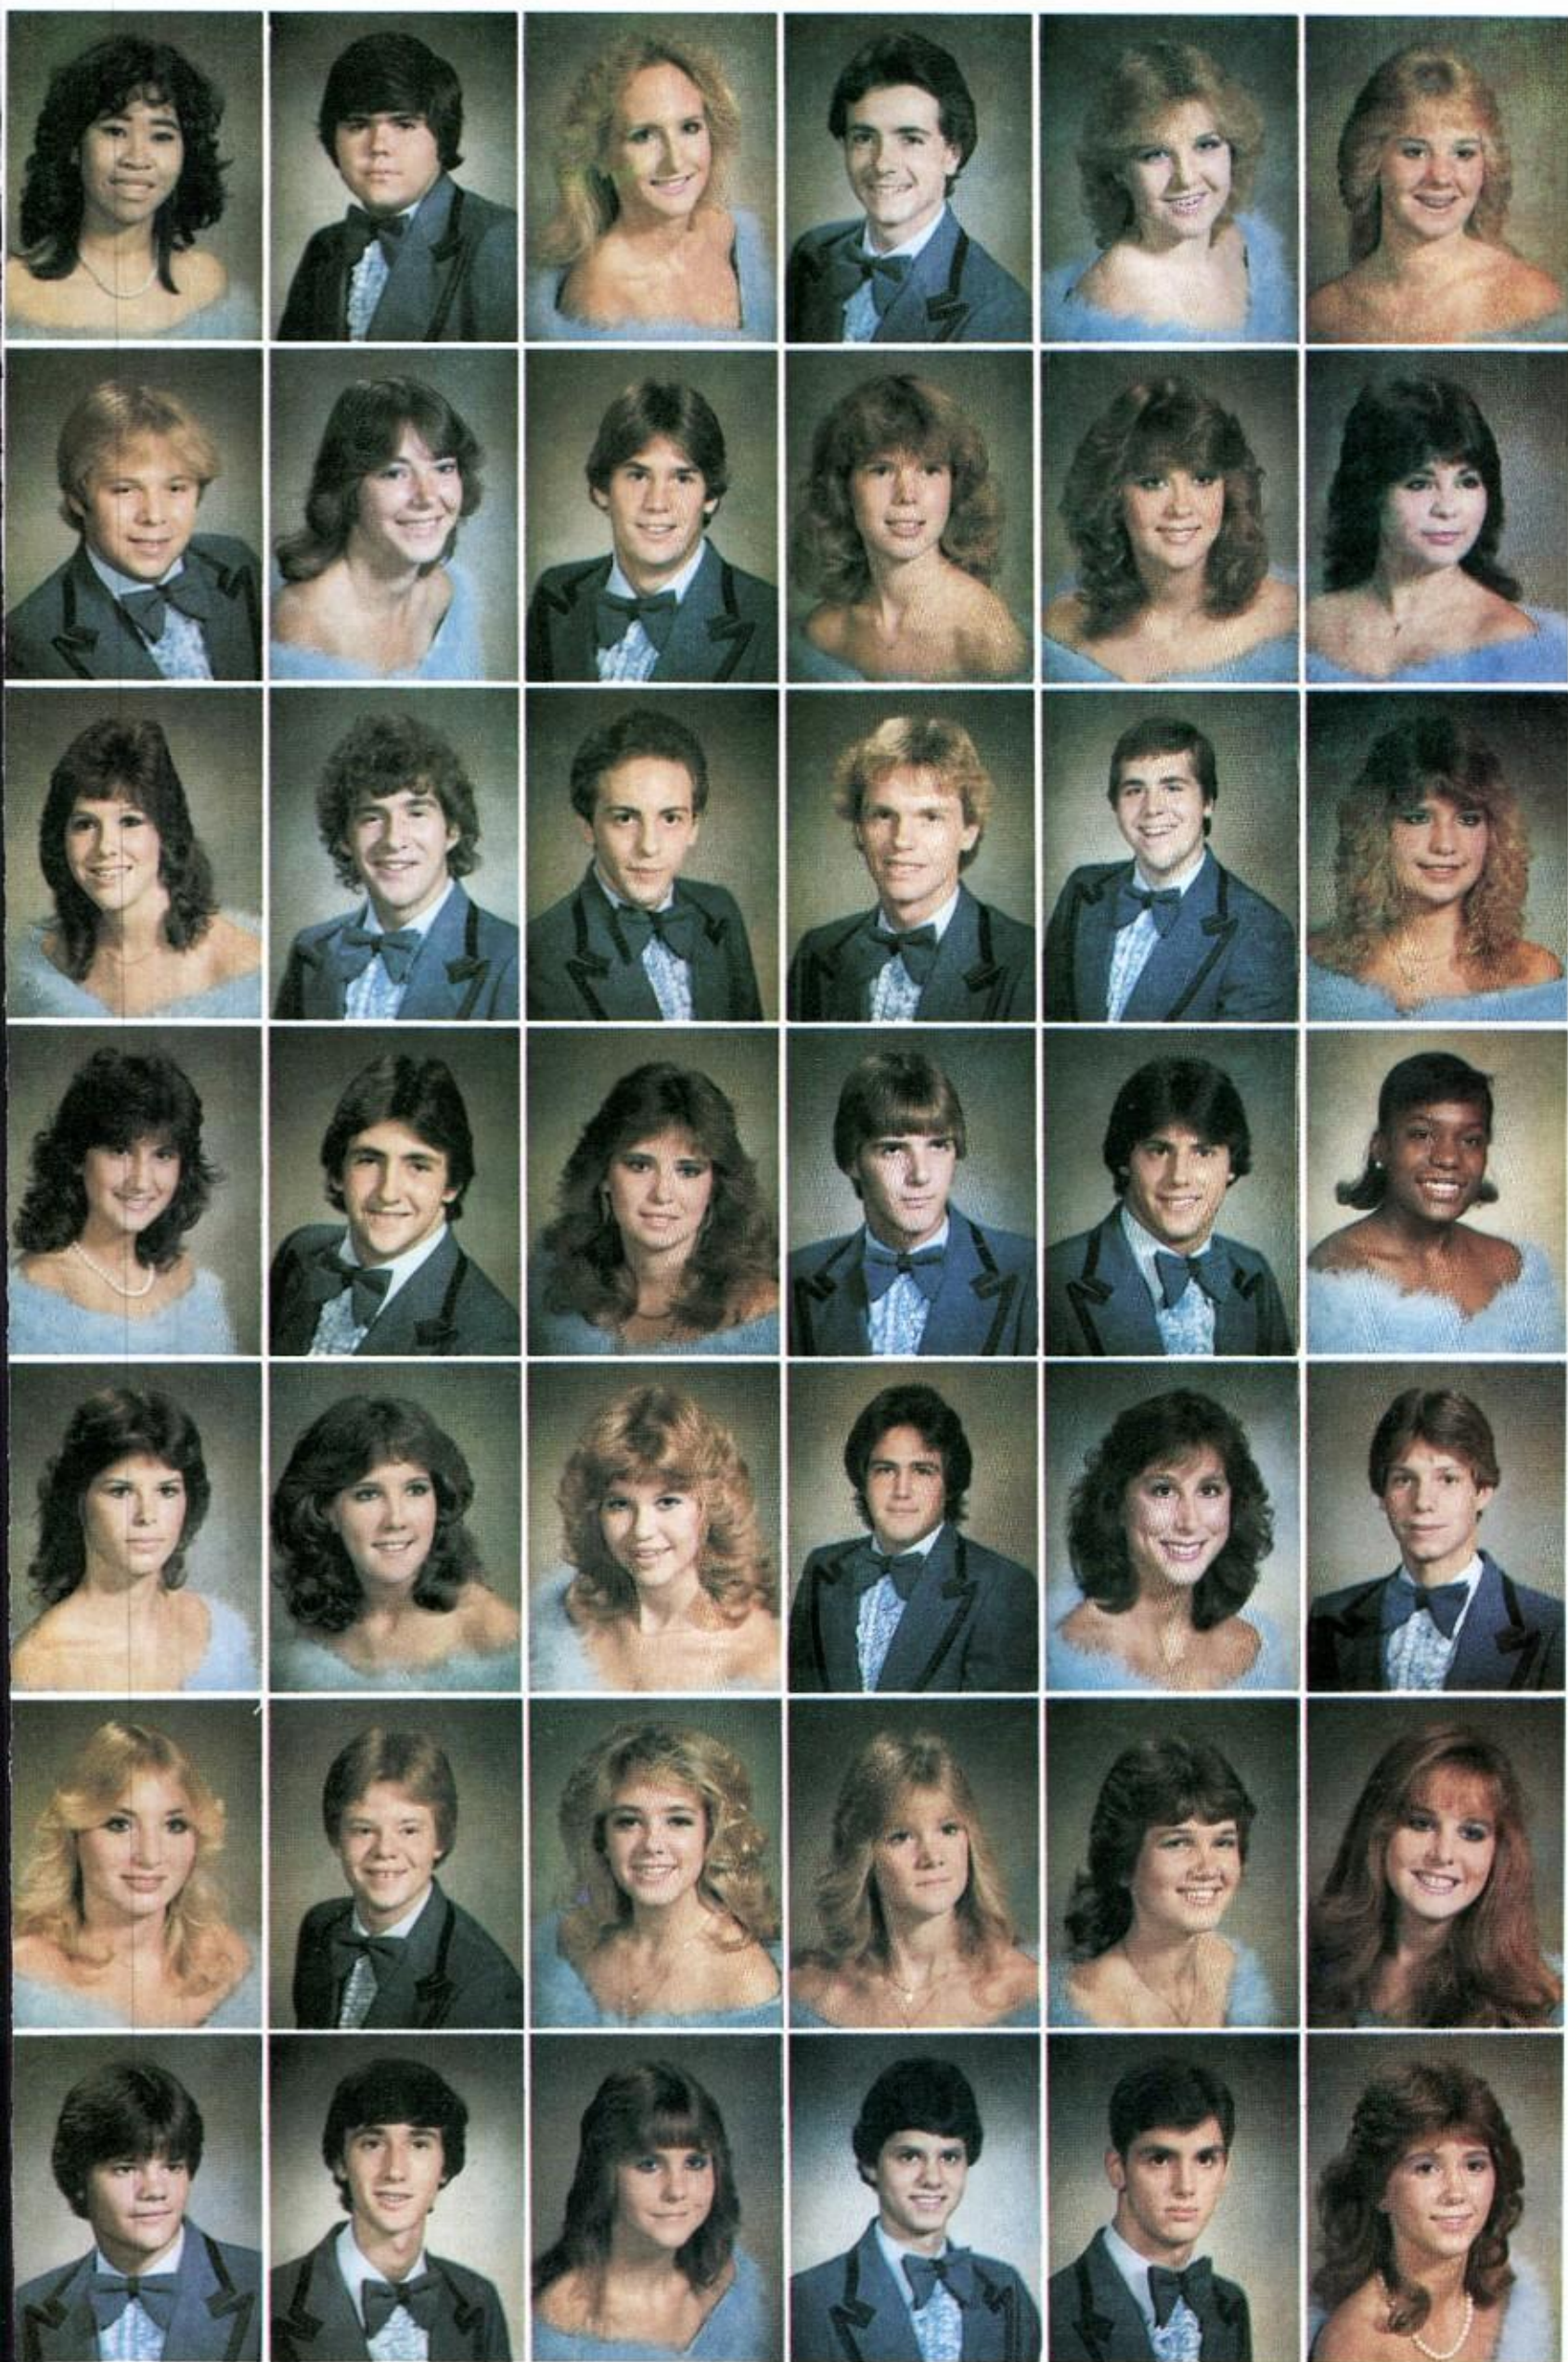

In 1984, the firm foundation had been laid, and all that was needed was a senior class that was overwhelming in spirit, dynamic in attitude, and beaming with life. This was the class of 1984. Senior dress up days added excitement and enthusiasm to the football season. Class meetings were held monthly to order caps, gowns and invitations. Senior newsletters were distributed bi-weekly by the senior counselors.

Graduation brought both feelings of excitement and anticipation to the class of '84. With it came the shocking reality that high school was now a thing of the past and that these experiences would influence the certainty of our futures. The annual senior prom was held at the elegant Houston Club, and was an evening not easily forgotten.

The feeling that this was not the end, but only the beginning was ever present. One thought was prevalent in the mind of every senior as they prepared to welcome the opportunities of today . . . "None before like the class of '84." The class of '84 definitely "had it all."

Juniors reflect on past, prepare for future

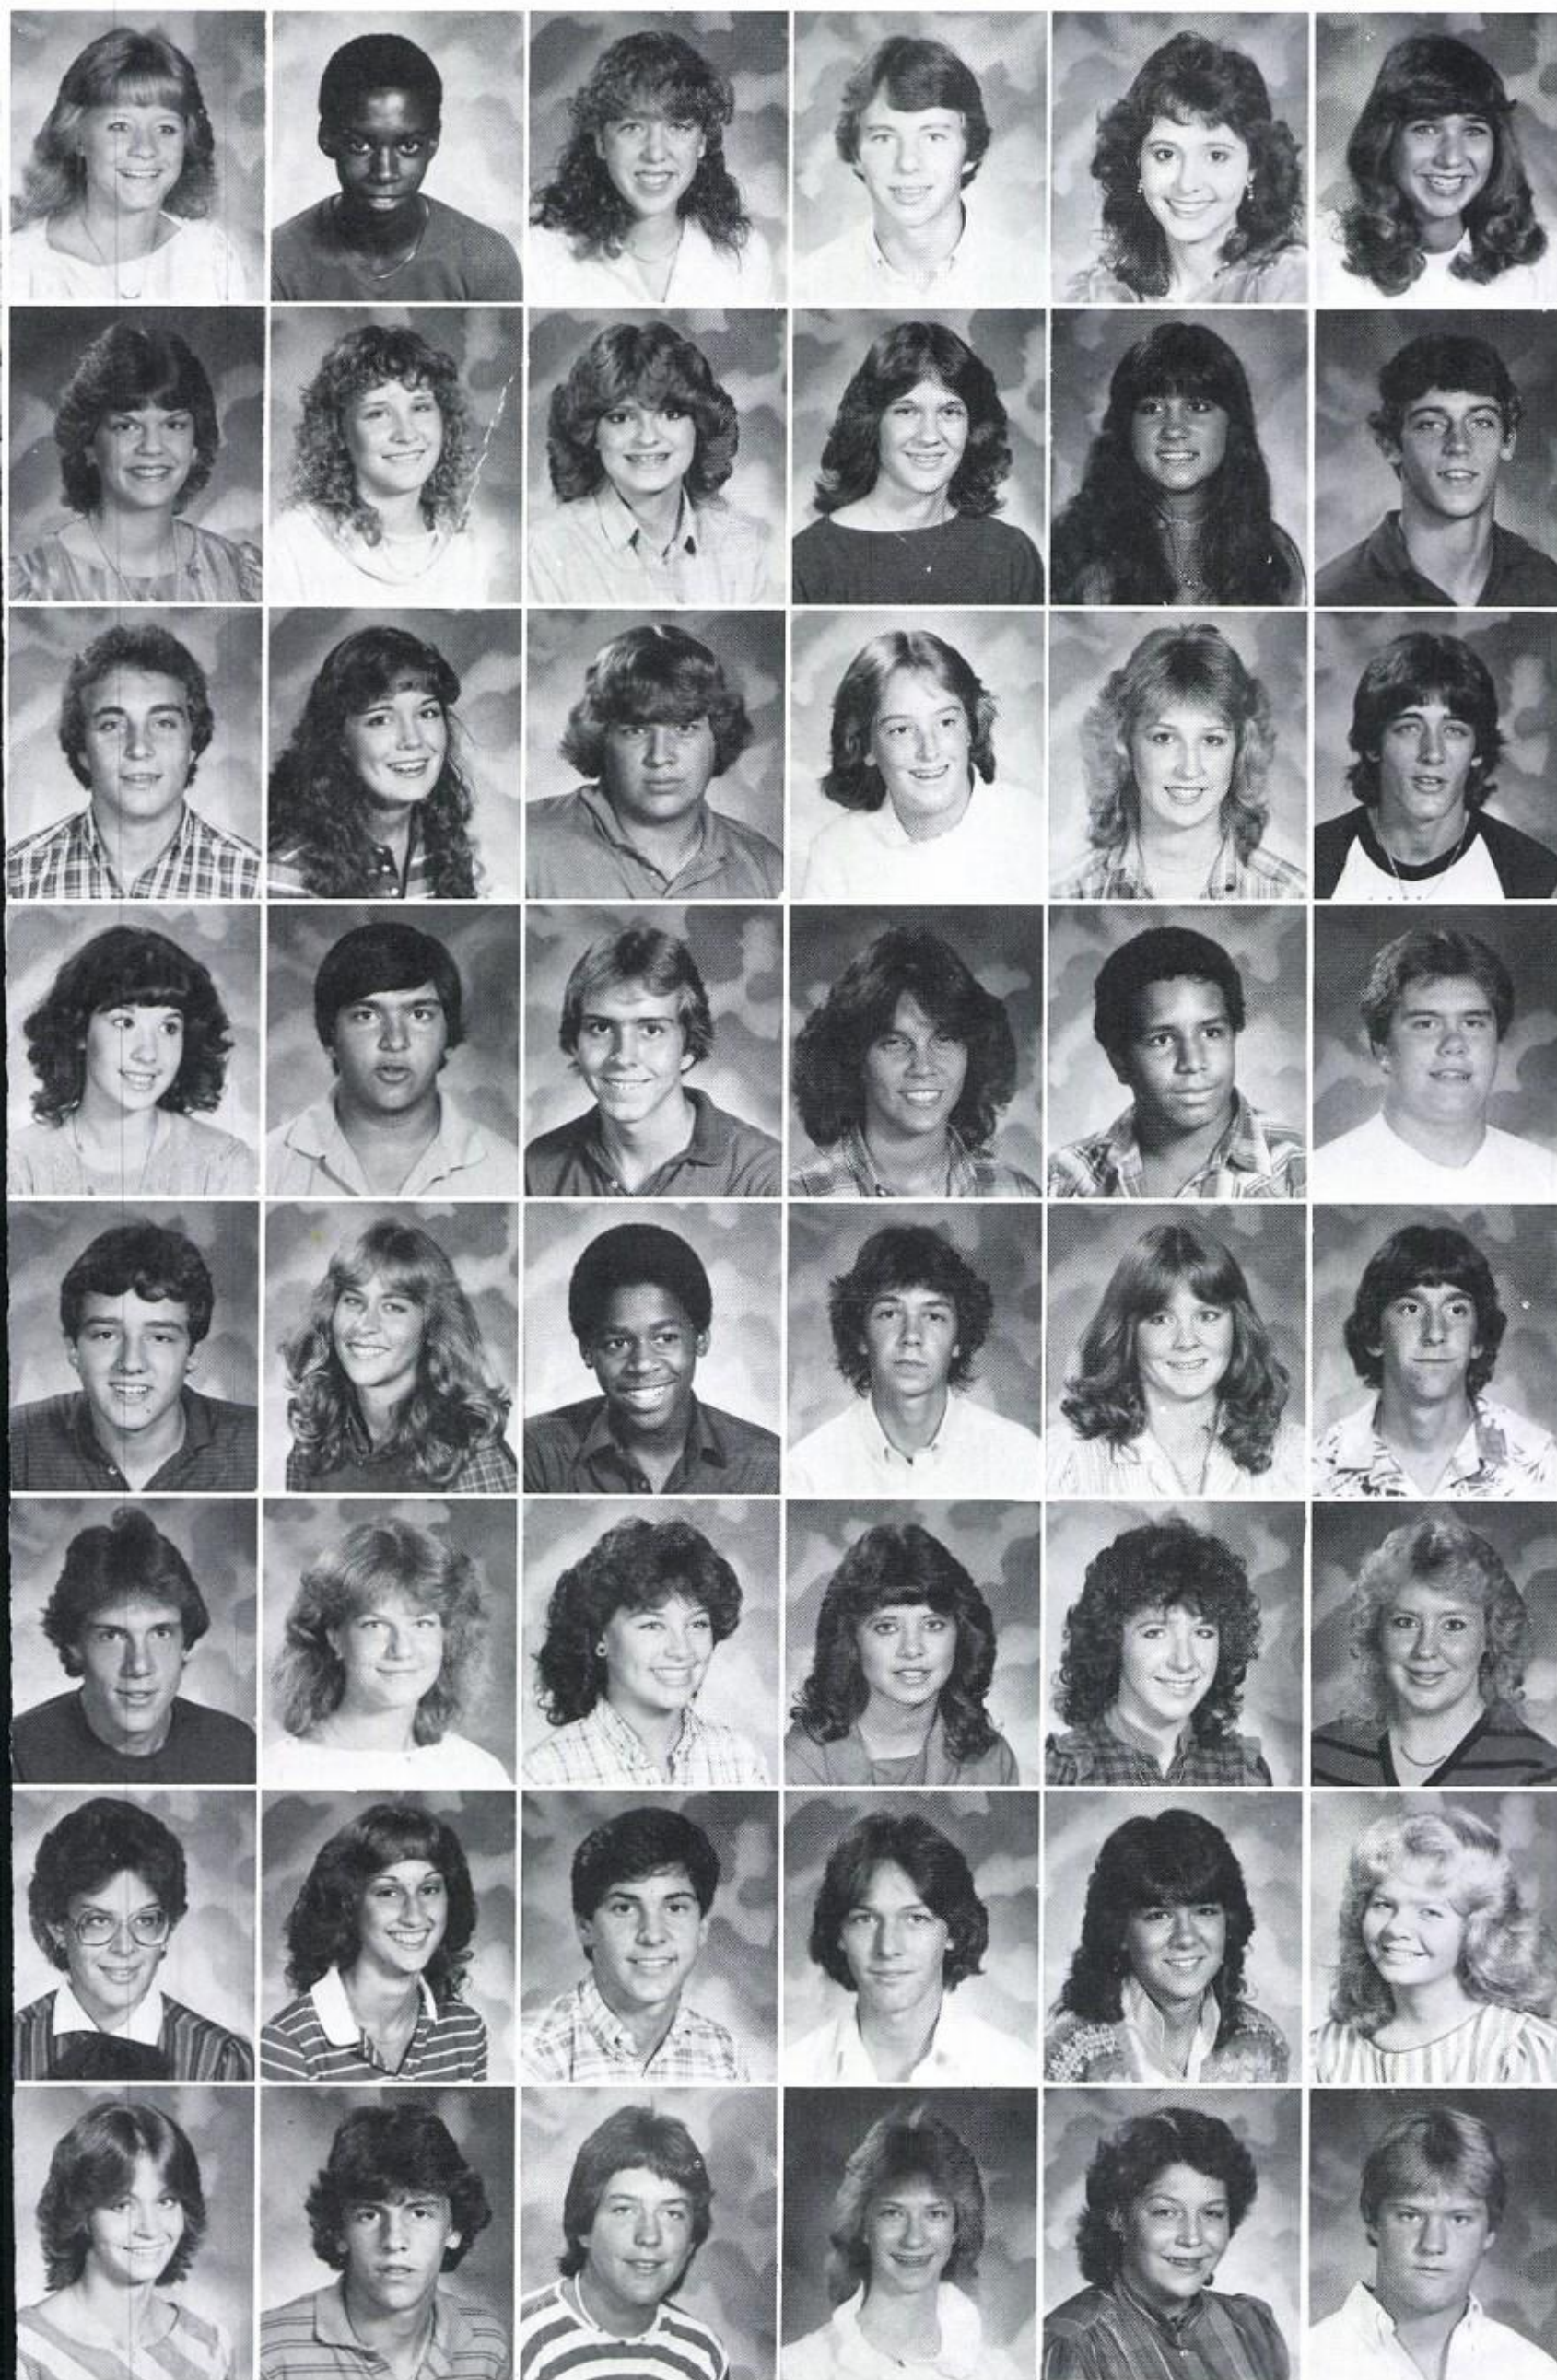

Two years down and two years to go was the thought on most of the junior's minds while filing into the cafeteria to receive their schedule on the first day of school. Looking toward the future, students suddenly realized research papers were to be written soon. They struggled with the papers through the months of September to November. Towards the beginning of the year, the juniors received the first of many newsletters published by the counselors. Newsletters informed them, for example, of the PSAT test dates and the various dates of the SAT. It also included scheduled events that involved the junior class.

At the beginning of the year the juniors had their first class meeting in order to discuss the purchasing of senior rings. This excited most juniors since it signified being an upperclassman soon. As well as receiving senior rings, the junior class also played against the senior class in a powder puff game where the girls were the football players and the guys were the cheerleaders and the Bearkadettes.

The students who served as the junior class officers were: President, Steve Thompson; Vice President, Sherry Stringfield; Secretary, Beth Ann Tragesar; Treasurer, Stan Gustas; and Reporter, Matt Bryant.

Coach Greene demonstrates how to stop a person from choking on sophomore Carol Thompson.

Sophomores make it halfway

One year represented a small fragment of time, but memories made during that one year would be treasured forever. With only two years remaining in high school, sophomores ventured forth in making career choices and decisions for the future.

The monotony was broken by new experiences such as learning to drive, dating, and renewing friendships. No longer freshmen, sophomores brought enthusiasm to the main campus. A typical sophomore schedule consisted of English II, biology, and geometry, rounded out by a wide variety of electives.

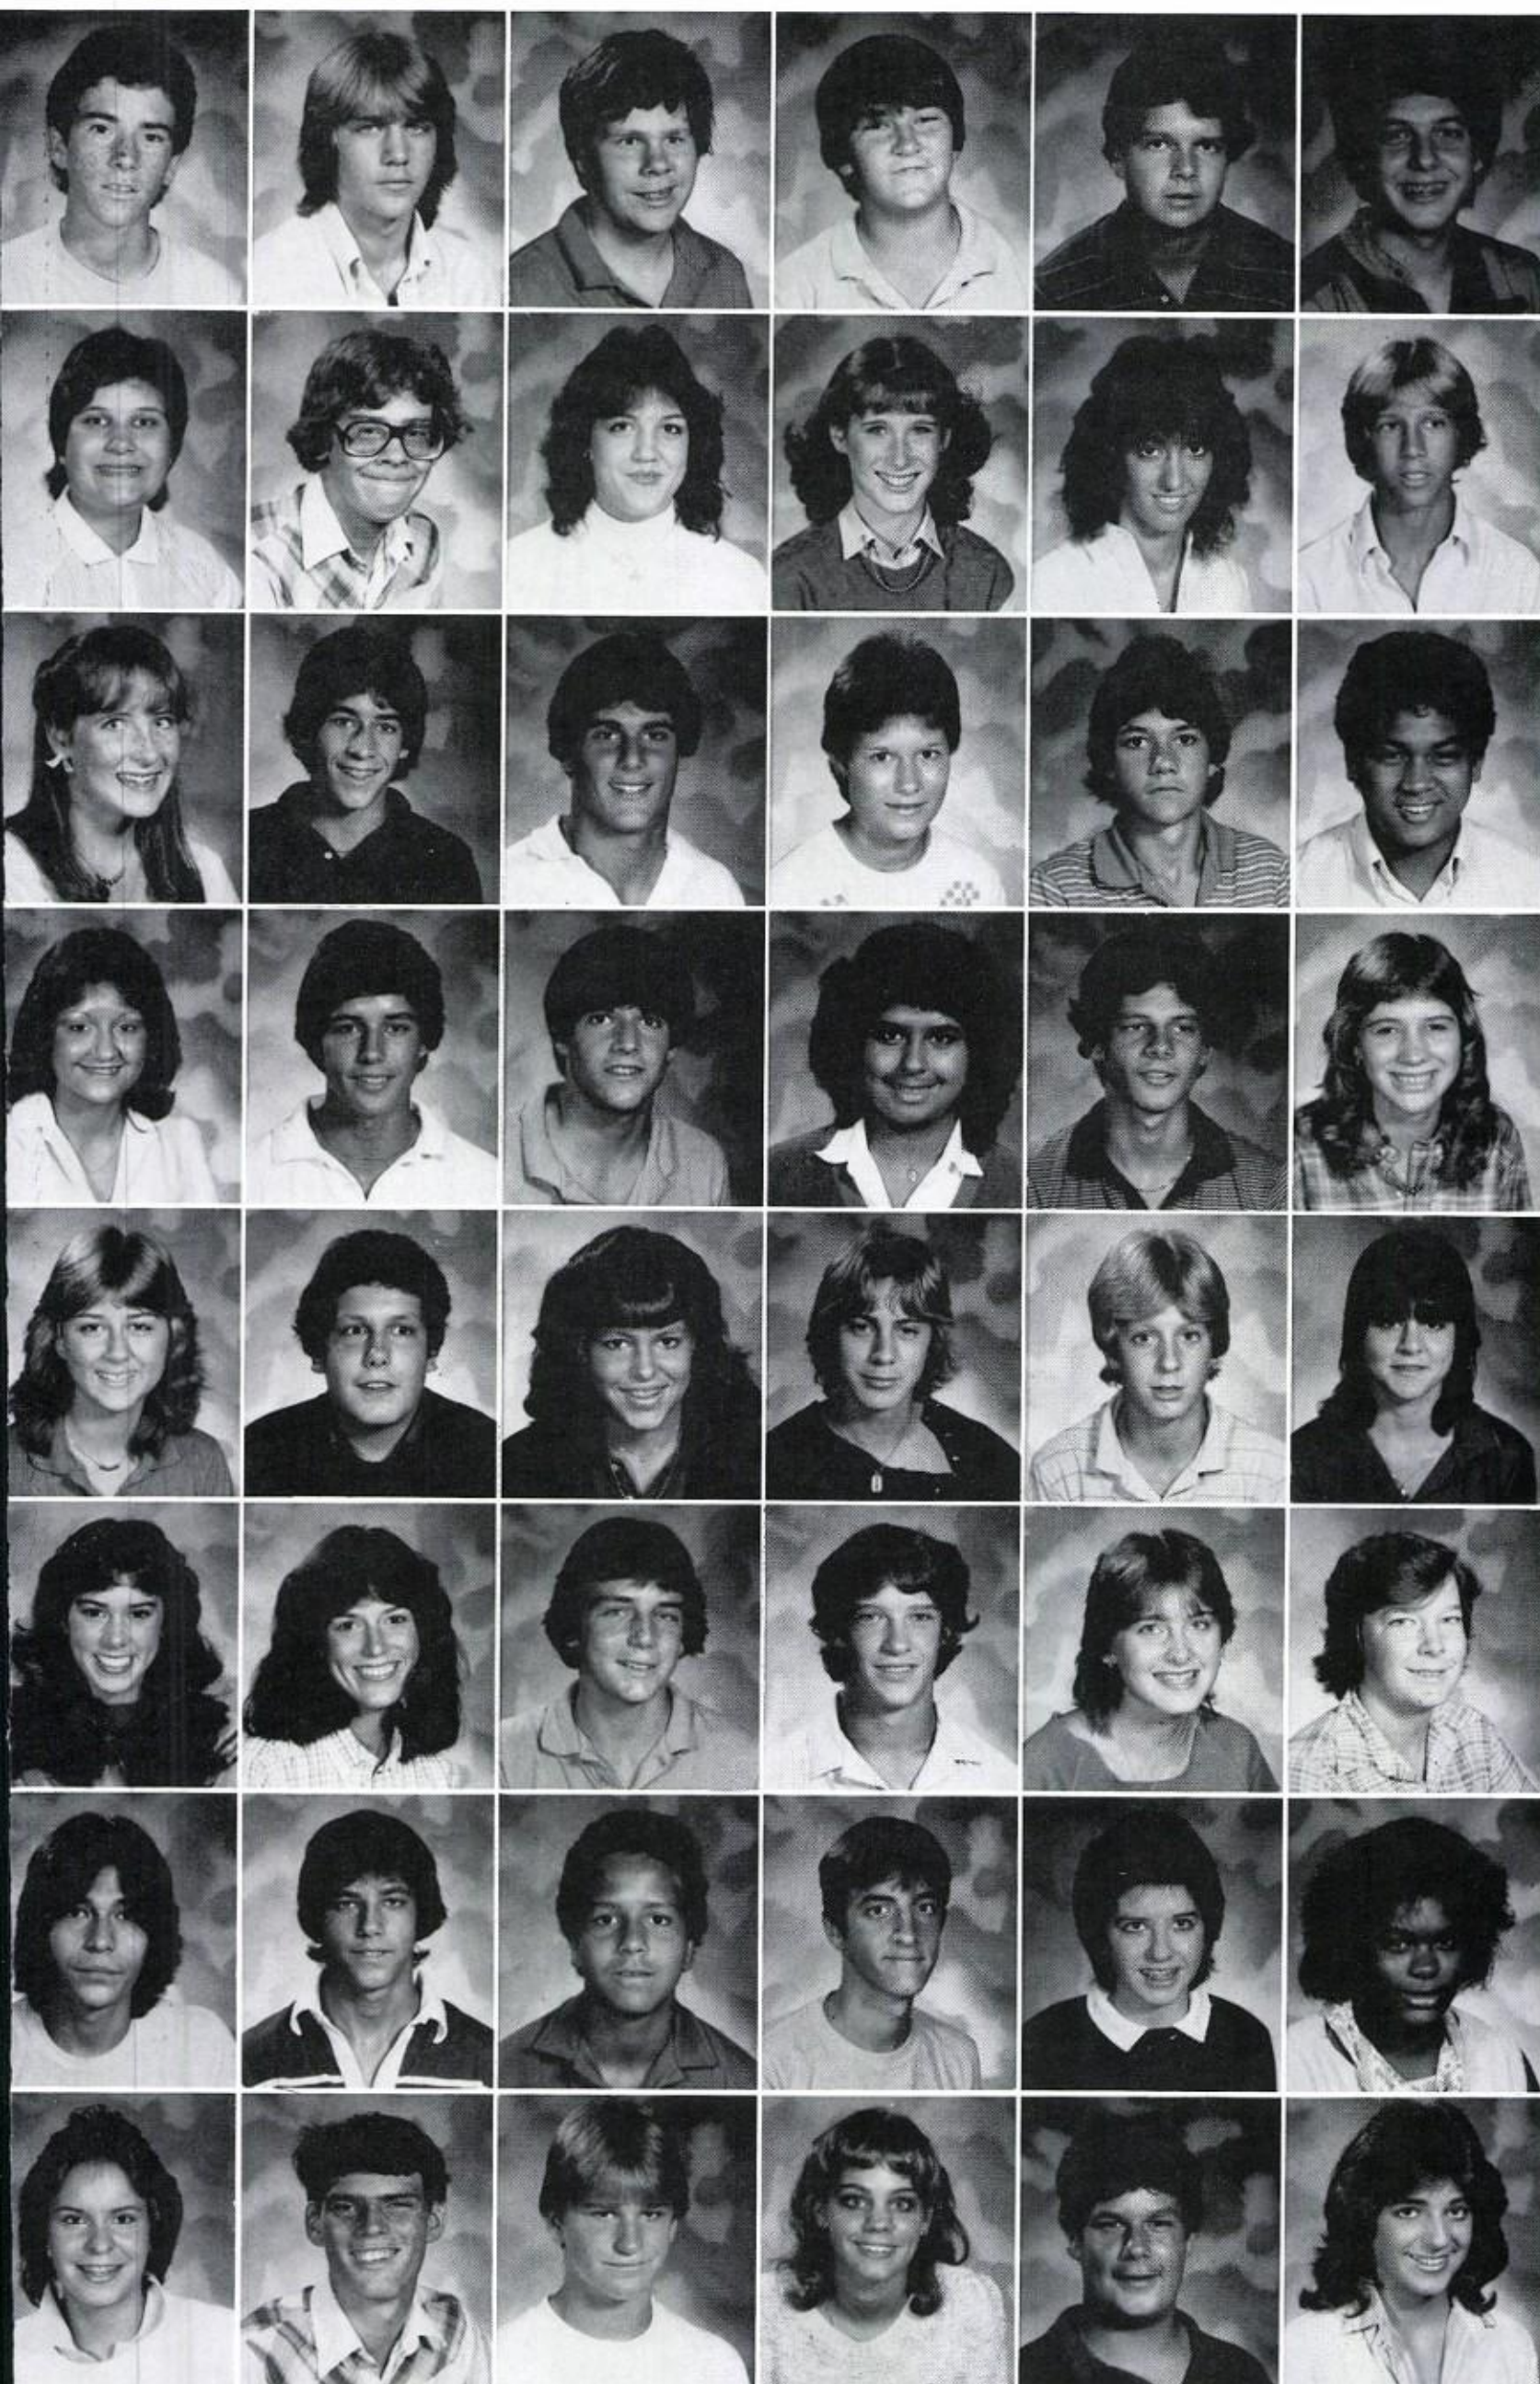

Extra-curricular activities provided opportunities to participate in anything from athletics to academics. Whether in football or volleyball, Key Club or Student Council, spirit was inspired by student involvement. However, homework was not forgotten. Nighttime brought geometry proofs and "Julius Caesar" to the homes of many students, not to mention annual science fair projects and English compositions.

Led by sponsors Adriana Mills and William Dixon, sophomore class officers enhanced the year with their accomplishments. The officers were: President, Kathy Mason; Vice-President, Christy Johnson; Secretary, Susan Earnest; Treasurer, Lisa Schneiders; and Reporter, Tonya Walker.

Little fish in a big pond

Freshmen entered Klein remembering intermediate days. However, throughout the year they learned that it didn't matter what intermediate they attended because they had all become Bearkats.

All 750 Fish showed their school spirit. They became involved in school activities such as: girls and boys sports, pep rallies, dances, clubs, and competitions.

Even though the Freshman year is one of the hardest years in high school, Freshmen maintained high grade standards. Many were involved in numerous honor courses and clubs.

The Freshmen were vocal at all school functions. The students voted for Student Council representatives. The Freshman class was represented well by its officers. The officers for 1983-84 were: President, Stacey Sanders; Vice President, Laura Spring; Secretary, Julie Newman; Treasurer, Nanette Walker; and Reporter, Heather Gonzales.

Even though students were from a variety of schools, cities, and states, the Freshman class of 1983-84 blended together to make a class that the Bearkats can be proud of.

Faculty enrich students for life

The real world. That is what Klein's faculty tried to prepare their students for this year. Teachers with experience in various fields enlightened students with interesting facts about different occupations. Some of the fields of study offered consisted of operating computers, creating newspapers, developing a yearbook, designing hairstyles, repairing engines and more.

Beside teaching students, teachers had many individuals jobs. They had to organize the daily curriculum, create tests, grade papers and average grades for approximately one hundred different students. Teachers also shared weekly hall duty before school hours and during lunch.

Counselors were also busy with their students. One of the most important duties of the counselors was informing students of the various courses that were available and scheduling courses once choices were made. Counselors also helped undecided students find their centers of interest. Students could also receive any information regarding colleges from the counselors.

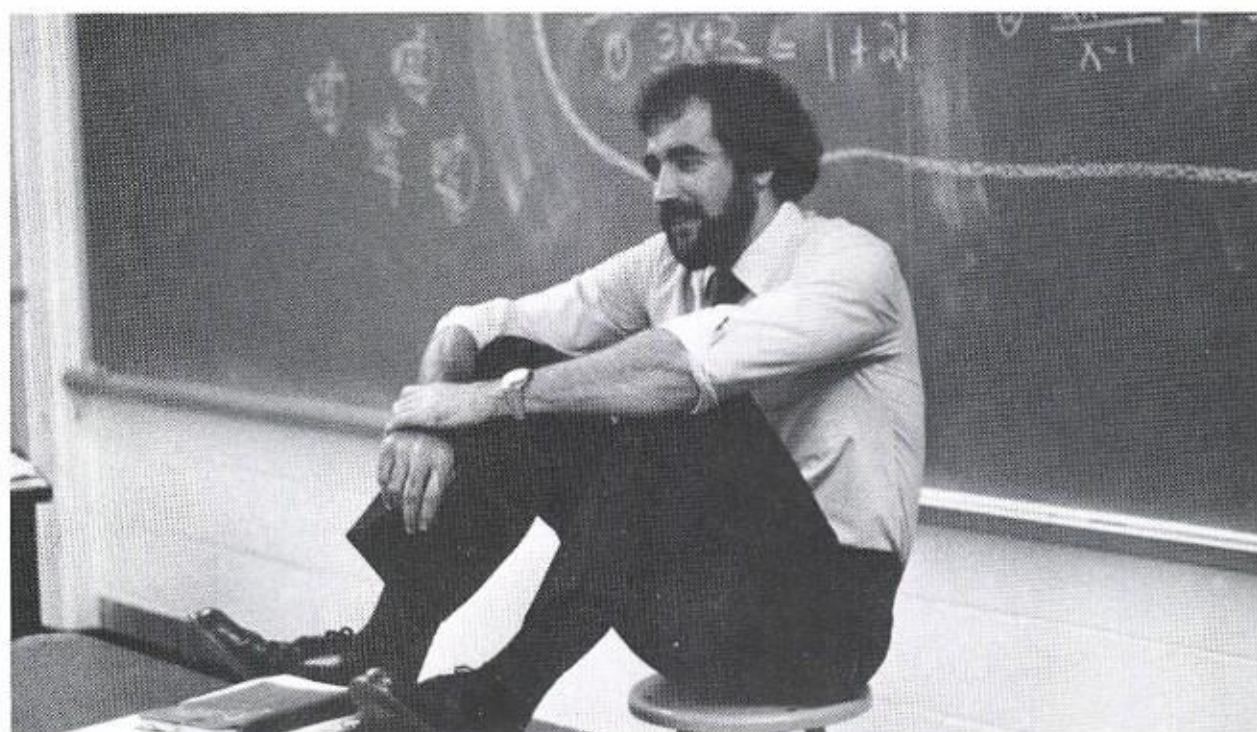

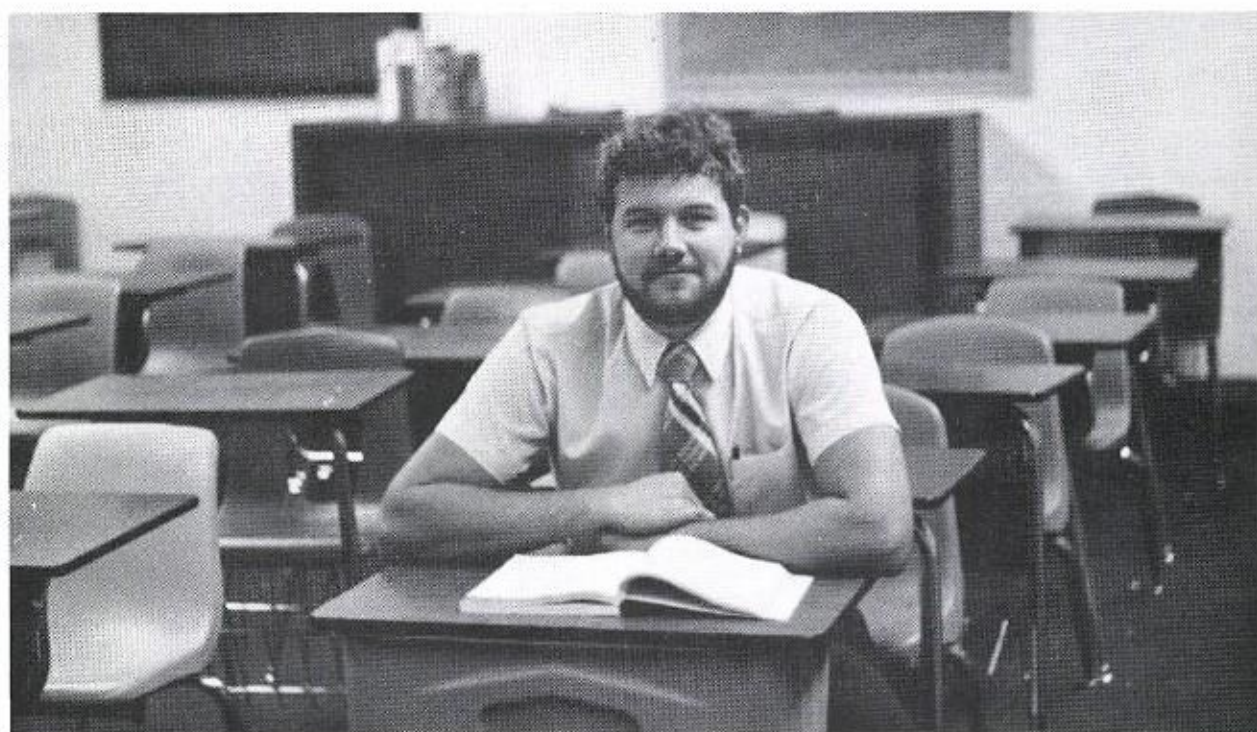

In various ways, the faculty and staff made sure their students were receiving the best possible education while broadening the personal interests of their students.

Trustees work to benefit KHS

The Klein School District has a national reputation for its academic, vocational and extracurricular programs. The Board of Trustees are the seven members, elected for three-year terms, that make the policies and appraisals for this district.

The job of the Board was to keep all the Klein District schools running smoothly and efficiently. An integral part of the Board was superintendent Dr. Don Collins who has held the position since 1970. Collins administered the schools within the Board of Trustee's policies and provided educational leadership to the district. The Board met every second Monday of each month to discuss the future of the Klein district.

The trustees for this year were: John G. Gilleland, President; Dee Miffin, Vice President; Joan Lucas, Secretary; Oren K. Sommerfield, Vernon E. Hallbeck, Bob Holmes, and Edwin Theiss.

Klein 'Has It All' with Laird

Behind the scenes this year was a man who kept the school together by overseeing the campus. This man was Ken Laird who has been the principal at Klein High School for three years.

Laird performed his many duties of nurturing the instructional program, managing the budget and handling the business maintenance. Laird handled all the responsibilities with respected efficiency.

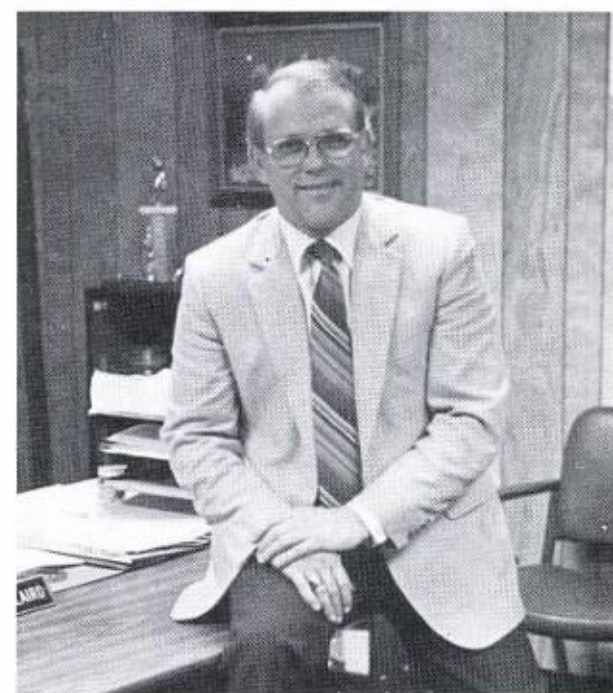

A typical day for Laird consisted of making and receiving telephone calls; organizing conferences with teachers, students and parents; and writing reports for the central office.

Between classes, Laird could be seen standing in the hallways not only keeping a watchful eye, but talking and joking with many of the students.

When Laird was not working at the school, he spent his time going to Klein's extra curricular activities or participating in his hobbies of golfing, games and yardwork.

Laird commented, "The students at KHS have it all with a well rounded program academically and socially."

Principals keep school running efficiently

Associate and assistant principals, under the direction of Principal Ken Laird, worked hard to keep the school running smoothly and efficiently. Duties included dealing with a multitude of problems, answering busy telephones and organizing an array of activities. Principals still found time, however, to visit classrooms and evaluate the staff.

Each principal handled several individual assignments. Kim Kaufman disciplined 10th grade boys and 9th grade girls with last names ranging from M-Z. He also supervised detention hall and the high rise building. Next, Ed Dowling disciplined 9th grade boys. He supervised the lunchroom, issued text books and supervised fire drills. During the first semester, Don Rather and Art Mittelstaedt shared all tasks. In January, Rather left Klein leaving Mittelstaedt fully prepared to handle all assignments. They disciplined 11th and 12th grade boys. The organization of substitute teachers, attendance policies, automobile registration and campus activities was also handled by these two men. Ann Sullivan disciplined 10th grade girls and 9th grade girls with last names ranging from A-M. She was the U.I.L. coordinator for literary events and the administrator and advisor for special ed. She organized the curriculum coordinating council and the handbook revisions.

Along with the five assistant principals, are three associate principals. The position was achieved by serving a number of years at Klein High School. Jim Laminack organized the discipline and maintenance in the careers center and the homemaking area. He set up the faculty duty roster, drug dog team, the tutoring program. Charles Pennington ran the overall campus construction, maintenance and security. Assisting with master schedules, handling lunch duty assignments and organizing student teachers were also performed by Pennington. Marianne Foreman disciplined all 11th and 12th grade girls. She organized the school calendar, fund raising programs, club activities, prom, graduation and senior activities.

As a tradition, sports were a major part of the school year, not only attracting a large variety of players but also spectators. Those interested in athletics were pleased to find that Klein indeed offered a host of different sports ranging from soccer, tennis and volleyball to track, football, and basketball.

Although on the high school level, Klein athletes still performed with the style and precision of professional athletes. Guided by an exceptional coaching staff, students practiced for hours before, during and after school.

This year's athletes had a passion and a strong desire to be the best. Their efforts proved worthy as the Varsity Football team found themselves one of the eight out of 230 schools to become Quarterfinalists in the Class 5A State Championship Playoffs. Another sport honored was the Tennis team, which ranked first in the State of Texas for the second year in a row. The Baseball team once again proved their strengths and abilities as they had in the spring of '83 when they traveled all the way to the State Semi-finals. All Klein sports teams played to the best of their ability instilling pride and honor in Klein's name.

Such a wide spectrum of sports together with a superb group of athletes truly did enable Klein to have it all.

Sports

Varsity football team hits high point

"Invincible" - no other word could better describe the 1983-84 Varsity football team. Attempting to by-pass the achievements of Bearkat teams from the previous years, the boys plowed through each opposition with vigor and determination. At the end of the season, they had accomplished this goal with eight wins and no losses in District play, but by no means was this the end of the Bearkats' incredible winning streak.

Westfield was the first stepping stone on the road to success. As the fans piled into Tulley Stadium, each member of the Klein team was preparing himself for a very important game. This win would not only give the Kats the Bi-District title, but would enable them to advance toward State finals. With the scoreboard showing a 28-8 Klein victory, the Westfield Mustangs walked solemnly off the field.

A surprising win for the Bearkats occurred when they traveled to Baylor University for the Area title. The Longview Lobos were defeated 35-0 and proved to be no competition for the ambitious Kats. The following week the team would face the "real" competition.

Nineteen buses full of cheering football fans, players, parents, cheerleaders, and Bearkadettes journeyed toward Texas Stadium, anxious for the game against Highland Park. When the Scotties ran the ball in for a touchdown the first play of the game, the Kats became even more fired up for the win. After two hours of superb blocks, punts, and tackles, spectators watched the time of the clock diminish. The score was tied 14-14, and the Kats pulled through once again with a minute and fourteen seconds to spare. In order to maintain the seven point lead, the Klein defense ran on the field prepared to fight. The strong defensive line held Highland Park on Klein's five yard line until time ran out. Looking at the scoreboard, the Bearkats were ecstatic; they were Regional Champions!

Certainly, the Varsity football team made a name for itself in the 1983-84 season. Although the boys were defeated by Plano 21-0 in the Quarterfinal competition, they were more than proud of their Regional title. The team's accomplishments will never be forgotten and without a doubt, 1983 will be remembered as the year of the Kats!

J.V. inspired

Certainly, the Junior Varsity football team kicked off a memorable season in 1983. Led by coaches Jerry Bradshaw and Scott Yates, the team realized its weaknesses and took advantage of its strengths. The offensive running back and defensive tackle positions proved to be J.V.'s best assets with experienced players such as Juniors Danny Jackson and Ricky Gartner and Sophomores Mike Guthrie and John Brim always ready to play to their utmost ability.

At the end of the season, the coaches were pleased with a 4-6 record. The players had successfully accomplished their primary goal by learning to block and tackle as never before.

The first week of November signaled the last game of the season, but J.V. players continued to practice with vigor and determination after the season drew to a close. Each player hoped to be one of the privileged few placed on the Varsity team in 1984. Coach Yates summed up the team's ambitions in one statement: "J.V.'s main purpose is to help Varsity as much as it can but at the same time, improve their skills so that they can make Varsity next year." Certainly, the Junior Varsity football team has made a name for itself in 1983.

Sophs succeed

Recruited from the Freshman football team was an athletic group of boys, alias the Sophomore football team. Under the leadership of coaches Gary Jackson and Charles Collins, the thirty-six underclassmen maintained a commendable record of 5-4-1. Both the offense and defense proved to be more versatile this year than ever before, blocking and passing with vigorous enthusiasm. Although the team lacked speed, the coaches were proud of the efforts provided by their winning team. Undoubtedly, the Varsity at Klein can expect to maintain a championship team knowing that these experienced sophomore players will continue a winning tradition.

The 1983-84 Blue Freshman football team.

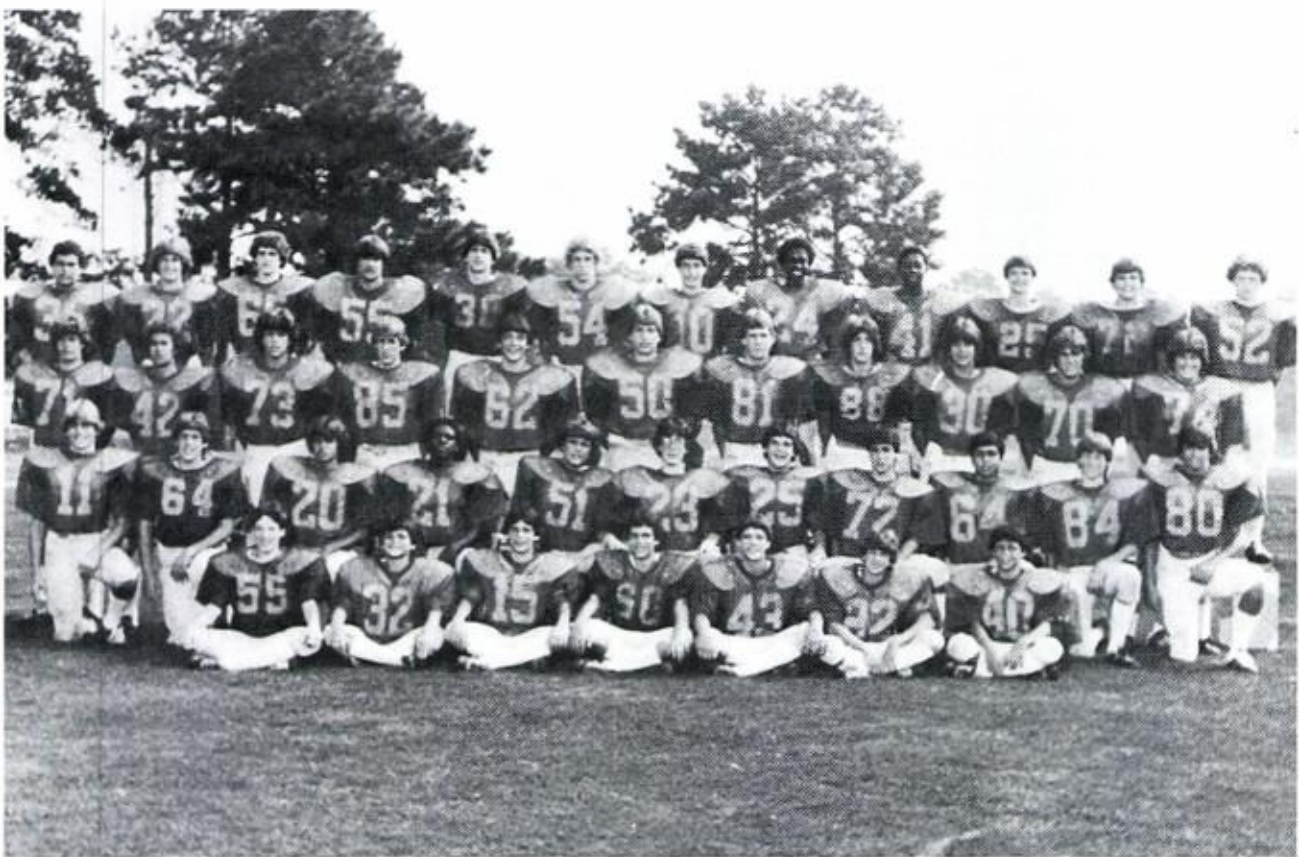

When school opened in September, hundreds of freshman poured into the unfamiliar high-rise, frightened of what lay ahead in the coming year. Fortunately, a group of young athletic boys found a significant way to be a part of Klein. This group was the 1983-84 Freshman football team.

With the help of experienced coaches Herbert Allen, Payton Mullins, Richard Perkins and James Pool, seventy-one players practiced every day after school, conditioning themselves for the upcoming games. The Blue team played extremely well this season losing only one game, with it's primary strength being an abundance of players. The coaches hope that a great number of the boys will be recruited to the J.V. team next year. Certainly, these freshmen found a way to get really involved at Klein.

Striving for perfection

Topping off sports at Klein was the varsity volleyball team. Striving for perfection was the main goal of this team. Each of the nine members of the varsity team helped contribute to a successful year. Members showed a strong devotion to volleyball by working hard at every practice which lasted for three hours everyday. Most practices included an exercise program. Some of the exercises involved jogging around the school, practicing maneuvers used at games, and performing conditioning methods such as sit-ups and push-ups.

Under the direction of Coach Laura Cline, the varsity volleyball team had a rewarding year. The roster consisted of: Shawn Aycock, Christy Cook, Lisa Daigle, Stacey Gonzales, Jessica Hite, Nancy Polka, Kristi Pope, Lisa Smith, and Beth Trageser. Jen Newton also traveled with the team as their photographer.

JV gets "set" for victory

Intense teamwork and unity were elements displayed this season by the Junior Varsity Volleyball team. All the practice and preparation put forth was visible in games and tournaments. The team placed third at the Oak Ridge Tournament. Coach Julie Christensen had the J.V. team work on adding a complicated offense with various plays and more advanced sets.

"I enjoyed working with such talented girls this year. They have a lot to offer in the future," claimed Julie Christensen.

The team members were: A. Cash, T. Davenport, P. Davis, L. Dodge, L. Eberle, J. Friess, M. Harper, J. Kenyon, S. Solomon, F. Whitfield. The J.V. team members hope to return next year to lead the Kats to victory with Varsity Volleyball.

Fish strive onward

In the eyes of coach Karen Stagner the Girls Freshman Volleyball team could be best described as being "aggressive." The offensive line brought exceptional strength to the team's playing ability. Practicing three hours after school everyday helped enable the team to put forth its best effort in games and tournaments. The girls won consolation at North Shore Tournament and second place at Oakridge Tournament. Stagner, the coach for four years, commented that the girls were well-prepared coming into the season and had unusual high team support.

Members were: W. Baron, K. Burns, C. Chapman, L. Gantt, J. Gowler, K. Grimaldo, J. Konicki, M. Moraitis, K. Noyes, J. Ogletree, K. Prince, T. Rosler, S. Smith, M. Solis.

Looking back at the talent in the freshman players, one could expect to see these girls take Klein volleyball to the top in upcoming years.

Varsity team strives for excellence

Boys varsity basketball was definitely a popular sport at Klein in the 1983-84 season. As fans cheered the Kats to victory every week, it was obvious that the five teammates on the court were in excellent playing condition. Coach Lloyd Long never had a reason to be disappointed in his winning team.

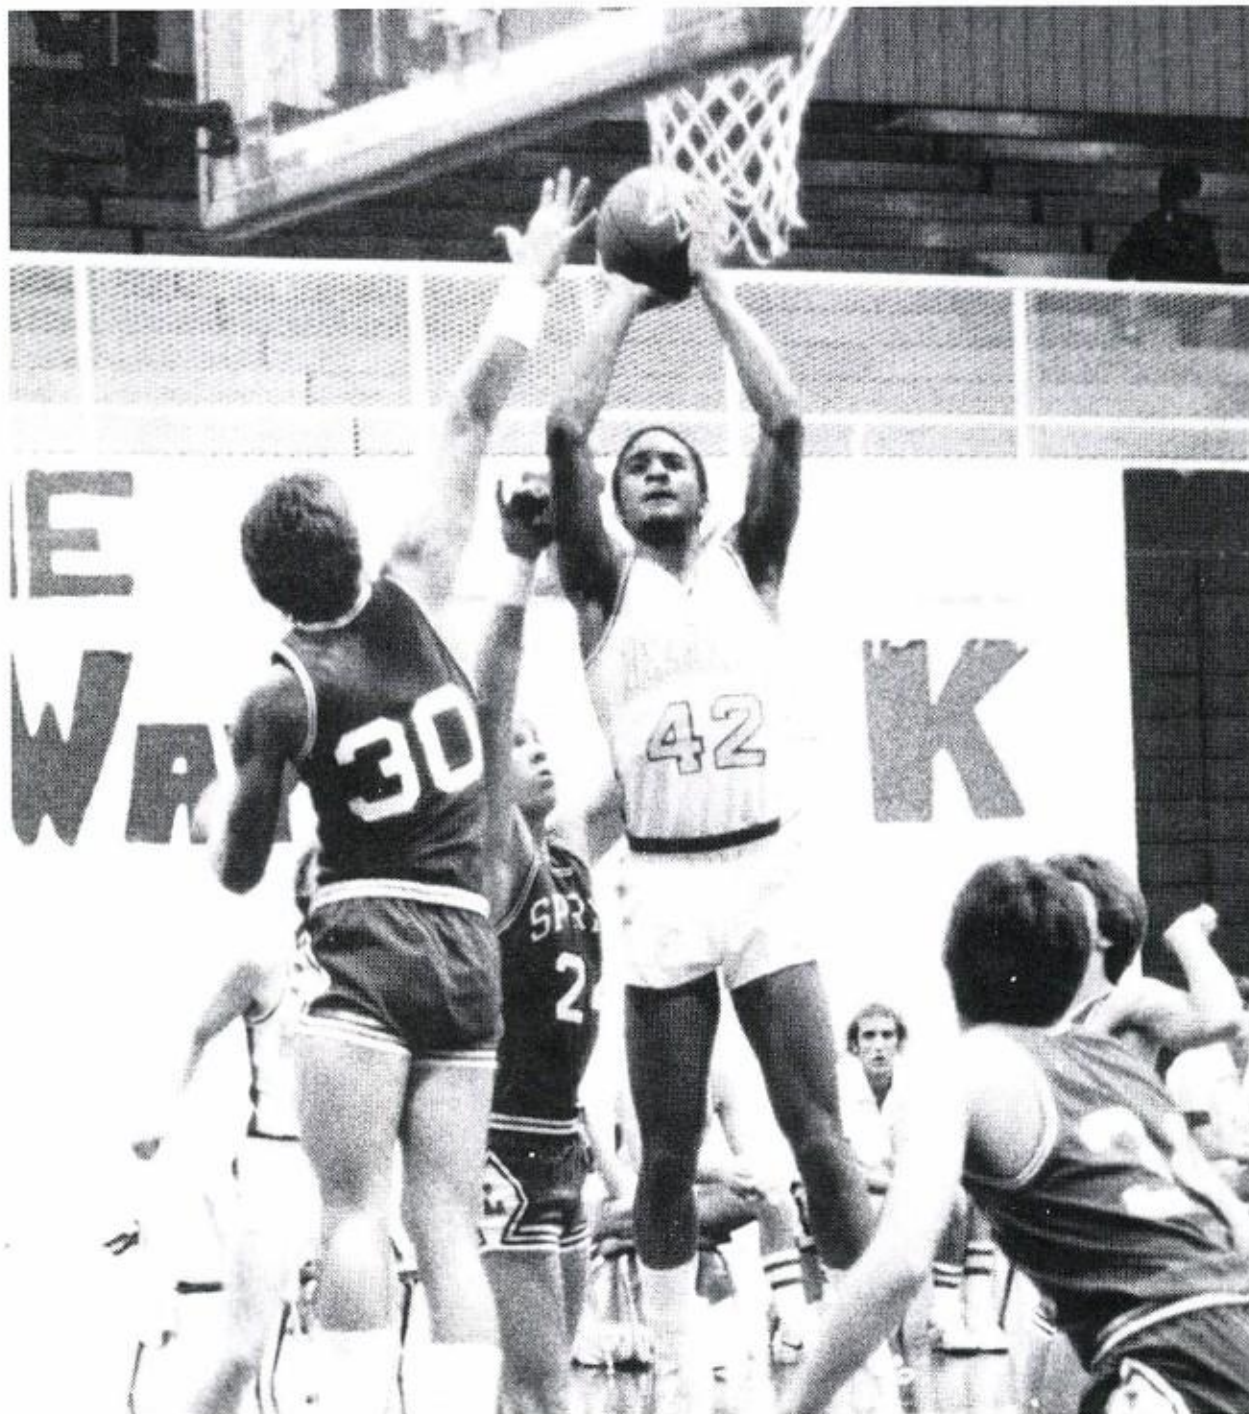

With ten seniors and one junior on varsity, experience was a key factor in both tournaments and District games. Competing in tournaments at Texas A&M Consolidated and Galena Park high schools, the Kats gained experience as well as confidence. Proud of their defeat against Cy-Creek, the toughest team in the District, the boys continued to practice with more spirit than ever before. Toward the end of the season, the team had earned an 8-0 District record. Each player strived to maintain this undefeated title. With talented players such as Troy Tutwiler, Anthony Strothers, Chris Hite, and Kenny O'Donnell, the boys varsity basketball team certainly deserved the recognition it acquired in 1984.

On the ball

The eleven girls chosen for the J.V. basketball team were dedicated to this highly competitive sport. When the season began in the first weeks of November, each player could be seen practicing jumpshots, dribbles and various other skills every day after school. Coach Jayne Obsourne and the girls were rewarded for their hard work when they placed second in the Kingwood J.V. tournament. With aggressiveness and a strong defensive team on their side, the members of the 1983-84 girls J.V. basketball team had every right to be proud at the end of the season.

The girls Freshman basketball team could also be seen practicing every day after school. These thirteen athletes played well throughout the season, each with the hope of receiving a position on the J.V. team next year. Because of their playing abilities and strong desire, Coach Kayla Morrison was very complimentary of her team. "The girls really pull together as a team when they need to. They are supportive of each other and all have an excellent attitude".

Kats place first in State

Through the years the Klein tennis team has been notorious for its outstanding accomplishments, placing first in State competition two years in a row. Although the fall competition was held at the University of Texas campus in Austin, the Klein team felt right at home. Both the boys and girls played each match with vigor, striving for the win. The players, coached by Bill Lacovara and Julie Christiansen, did not achieve this goal without much hard work. Anxiously preparing for the various tennis tournaments, the athletes practiced backhand and fronthand swings as well as many other skillful maneuvers each day during sixth period. Under the leadership of Kim Richards and Tim Lootens, the tennis team excelled tremendously in the year of 1983, especially proud of yet another State Championship.

Swim team makes waves

On October 15, 1983 approximately fifty swimmers dove into the tranquil water of the Klein pool, anxiously ready to begin the swim season. Under the leadership of Coach Jim Nelson, the swimmers practiced both before school and during first period preparing for a successful year.

Captained by Senior Jennifer Pokluda, the girls team proved to be superior in almost every event. Pokluda, last year's State Champion in the 100 yard backstroke, and talented swimmers Roxanne Nelson, Emily Seay, Kathy Mason, Aileen Hannigan and Kristine Nickles were a great asset to the team.

The boys team, captained by Senior Doug Farrell, consisted of strong underclassmen who improved tremendously over the year. Complimenting the swim team was an elite group of divers who added extra life to the meets. Jeff O'Meara, last year's winner in the State Diving Competition, represented his team with tremendous spirit and provided leadership in the various meets.

Undoubtedly, the swim team, as well as the diving team, made up an important part of the sports program at Klein in the 1983-84 school year.

Watching the ball sail through the air, the batter begins to sprint toward first base. With no signs of danger in sight, he easily circles around the remaining bases. The player scores, proud of yet another run for the Bearkats!

The varsity baseball team had its share of victories in the 1983-84 season. Having advanced to the State Semi-finals last year, the athletes began this season with much determination. The team's main strength proved to be a willingness to win; this was a definite advantage in District competition.

The Bearkat team consisted of an experienced group of athletes who strived to improve their skills in every practice. With players such as Pitcher Kyle Atkinson, Short-stop Arne Lindblom and First Baseman Peter Nies, the team received a notable reputation. After competing in tournaments at Aldine and Brenham high school, the boys felt very secure about their playing abilities. Herb Allen, the team's dedicated coach, set high standards for his players. The athletes not only met but surpassed Coach Allen's expectations in the 1983-84 season.

J.V. sets goals in '84

J.V. baseball proved to be a popular sport at Klein in 1984. An overwhelming 125 boys tried out for positions on the J.V. team, yet only twenty of these athletes were chosen. During practice these dedicated players strived to improve their playing skills, mainly concentrating on the infield positions. J.V.'s main strengths, hitting and pitching, were an asset in every game played. Early in the season, Coach Scott Yates summed up the expectations he had for his team. "I'm looking forward to this year's season. Our goal this year is to win District and contribute in any way towards getting the players ready for Varsity play."

Cross Country sprints toward District meet

In the months of September and October when other students were eagerly awaiting the 2:15 p.m. bell, the Cross Country teams knew that the end of the school day was far from over for them. Both boys and girls could be seen running around the school, as well as through nearby subdivisions as late as 4:00 p.m. In the end the hard work and determination provided the runners with a prosperous year.

Unfortunately, the boys Cross Country team was plagued with injuries all season, yet it was able to uphold an outstanding reputation, finishing a respectable fourth in the District. Led by Sean Murray, John Schlensky, and Ray Vigil, the boys team had every right to be proud of its 1983 record.

The girls Cross Country team won the District Championship and went on to finish fifth out of sixteen teams in the Regional meet. Helping the girls to literally run-away with the District Championship were Terri Hollingsworth, placing first, Julie Friess, placing second, and Kris Johnston, placing fourth. Coach Allen Baker was very confident in his team's abilities and treasured the leadership that was provided by the senior girls.

Overall, both the boys and girls Cross Country teams achieved remarkable goals contributing to Klein's excellent reputation in sports.

Athletes reach new heights

When the football season was over and the action in Klein Stadium died down, the track season soon began, sparking enthusiasm from the fans once again.

The boys 1983-84 track team, coached by Gary Jackson, prevailed in such events as hurdles, high jumps, discus and shot put. Each member of the team practiced long and hard every day for these events as well as for various running competitions. With seven returning lettermen from last year's team, Coach Jackson was proud of this experienced group of boys who were eager to succeed in District competition. Outstanding prospects for the boys team were Sean Murray in the mile run, Robert Conrad in sprints, Randy Stanfield in hurdles, and Bryon Forsythe and Jake Guarino in field events.

The girls track team also competed with enthusiasm in the 1983-84 season, with eight lettermen returning from last year's team. Coach Karen Stagner encouraged her girls to help one another during practice; the results were prosperous. With strengths such as mid-distance and distance running on its side, the team placed well in almost every meet. As the season drew to a close, the members of the girls track team could recall a successful season with a smile.

Soccer kicks off a winning season

The 1983-84 boys Varsity soccer team.

Soccer, a sport introduced to Klein two years ago, gained much recognition in the 1983-84 season. The boys team, coached by Allen Baker, certainly had a successful year. The offense was led by senior strikers Louis Nelson and Brett Countryman, definitely a winning combination. Supporting both the offense and defense, the midfield was in excellent form with Pat O'Toole, Peter Meyer, and Craig Langston playing to their best ability. The defense, one of the best in the area, consisted of experienced players such as Charles Valles, Greg LeMaster, Steve Thompson and John Schlensker; they were a tremendous help to goalies Mike Bierman and Eddie Enriques in every game played. The team also considered the skills of two outstanding sophomores, Scottie Newburger and Jerry Key, a great asset on the field. With an organized and well-developed group such as this, the boys soccer team excelled in 1984.

The 1983-84 girls soccer team also had a successful season. After competing in State Championships last year, the girls returned home with a winning attitude and were prepared to begin this season with much enthusiasm. Coached by Laura Cline, the girls took advantage of their strengths in practice as well as on the field. The outstanding offensive unit scored numerous points throughout each game with the defense always anxious to play. Coach Cline had every right to be confident in her girls and their eagerness to improve. Undoubtedly, the 1983-84 girls soccer team played tremendously well throughout the season, each member proud of her accomplishments.

Golfers drive with expertise

All is quiet as the golfer prepares to putt for his first birdie of the day. With satisfaction on his face, he watches the ball slowly roll into the hole. He did it!

This was a familiar scene to all of the members of the Klein golf team. Each golfer practiced diligently every day at various courses such as Treeline and Champions, striving to be the best possible in District competition. With patience and skill on their side, the teams worked together, putting, driving, and pitching their way down a lengthy course. As every golfer knows, nothing is more exhilarating than watching a golf ball soar through the air after a fantastic hit; members of the Klein team observed this feat quite often. In addition to their excellent playing skills, both the boys and girls, coached by Lloyd Long and Carol Helms, had determination and a competitive spirit that continued throughout the season. Golf was truly a captivating sport at Klein.

Local businesses flourished due to the patronage of people living and working in the Klein area. These establishments supplied virtually every type of goods needed or wanted and always offered "service with a smile."

To further promote mercantilism, owners often found a need to advertise. When members of the yearbook staff approached offering ad space in the '84 Bearkat, it seemed the perfect answer. Banks, realtors, restaurants, clothing stores, jewelers and florists to mention just a few, advanced their businesses and supported the Bearkats all in one step.

Students and parents invested in advertising space to publish personal messages to a menagerie of individuals. Organizations within the school also chose to purchase ad space to offer thanks to the entire student body for their spirit and backing.

Without fail, businesses in the surrounding area generated a fervor which spread throughout Klein. Lacking the endorsement of so many individuals and institutions would have altered Klein's chances of having it all.

Stimulating Ideas Make Stimulating Churches

It isn't easy to live in our idea-glutted society and still feel the stimulation of the best ideas. So we try to examine the most worthwhile ideas. We are a people who are trying to increase our understanding of what it means to be a whole person in a broken world. Try one of our stimulating churches.

!!!Soccer Seniors!!!

For you the year is over, the season's end has come.

Both on and off the field, we've lost and we have won.

But remember as the years pass, that you helped pave the "way".

To bring to Klein "King Soccer" and that is here to stay!!

To the class of '84:
To laugh
is to risk appearing the fool.
To weep
is to risk appearing sentimental.
To reach out for another is to risk involvement.
To expose feelings
is to risk exposing our true self.
To place your ideas, your dreams.
before the crowd
is to risk loss.
To love
is to risk not being loved in return.
To live
is to risk dying.

To hope
is to risk despair.
To try at all
is to risk failure.
But to risk we must,
because the greatest hazard in life
is to risk nothing.
The man, the woman, who risks nothing does nothing, has nothing, is nothing.

A Reflection

Just as we anticipate each school year, there comes a time for us to reflect upon it, remembering good and bad moments, happy and sad times. From this, memories are gained which are never forgotten.

Making this year unique was the senior's choice of pink and purple for their class colors. A visit from General and Mrs. James Dozier gave our school prestige as the only Houston area school honored by his visit. As always, there was homework, catnaps in class, parties, dances, holidays and finals.

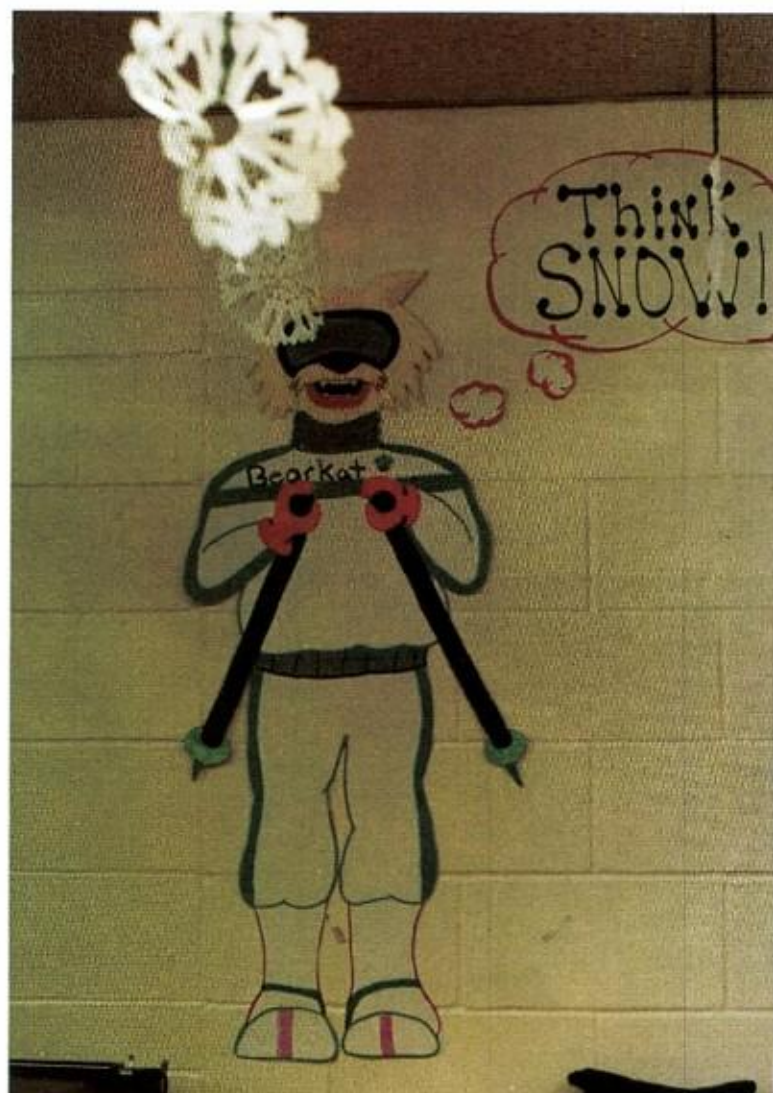

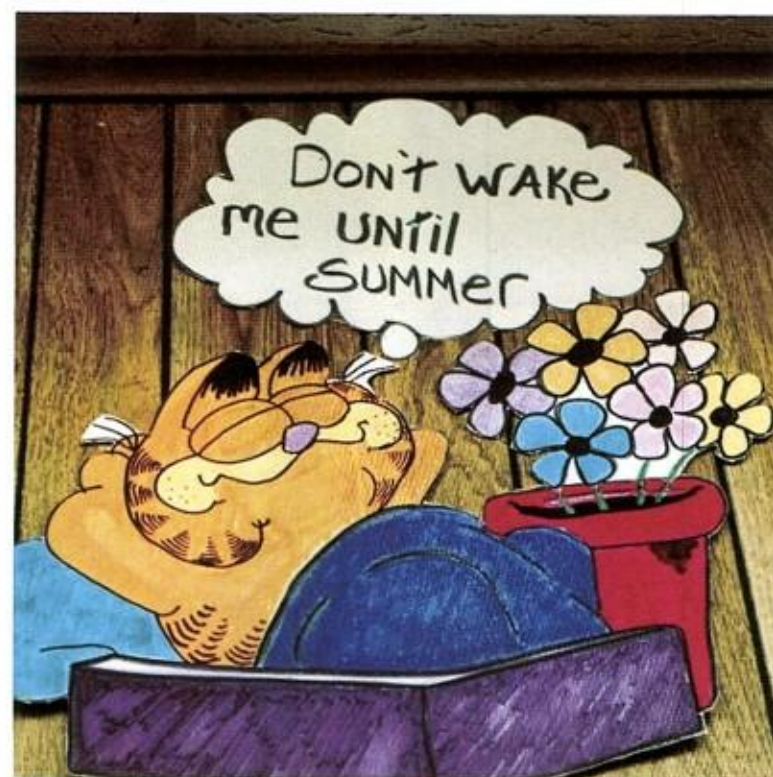

The people of Klein pursued routine and unusual events, making the memories of this year have it all.

Characters such as Garfield and the Bearkat could be seen throughout classrooms expressing attitudes which were all too common during school. Photo by Jen Newton.

Two major storms swept through the Houston area leaving the Klein area powerless and destroying many local businesses.

On the preppy side of fashion, Gucci Baggs, add-a-beads, Polo's, and top siders were the prominent stylish trends.

Music played a major role in the lives of Klein students. KLOI, KSRR and KKBQ were the most listened to radio stations. Concerts were another source of listening enjoyment, as students were able to get closer to the action.

Time Capsule

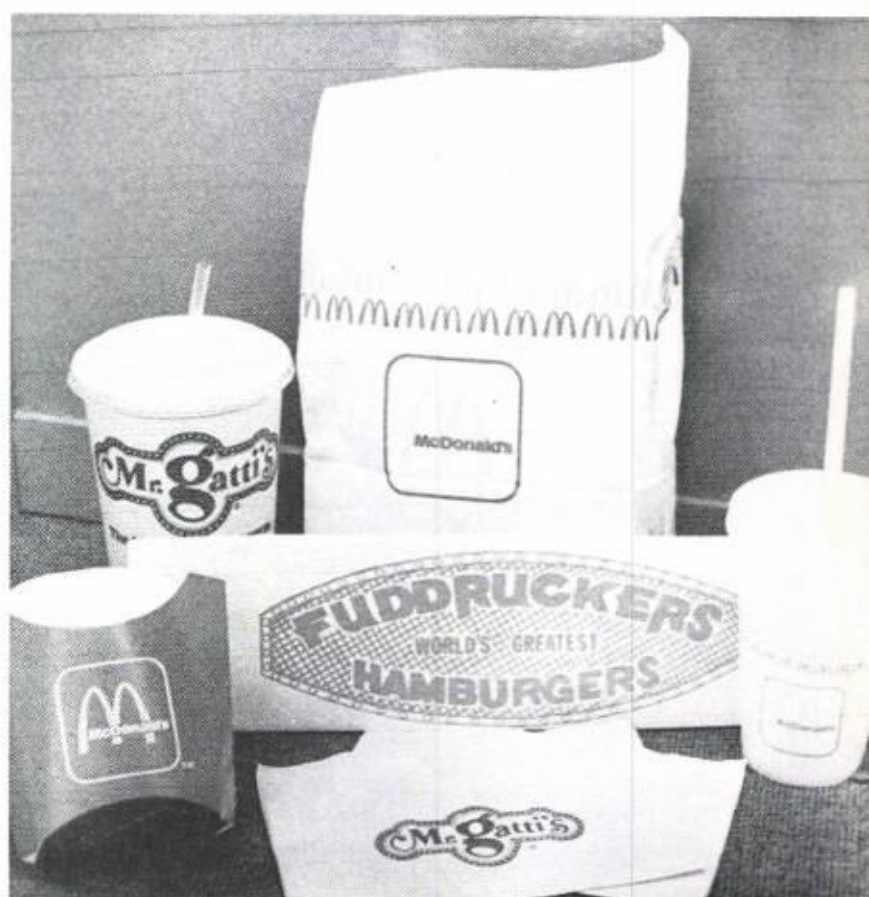

New Wave dress caught on quickly at Klein and students found themselves dressed in parachute pants, Vans, sleeveless shirts and mini-skirts. Bandannas, decorative glasses, pins and colorful jewelry were worn to add a special touch.

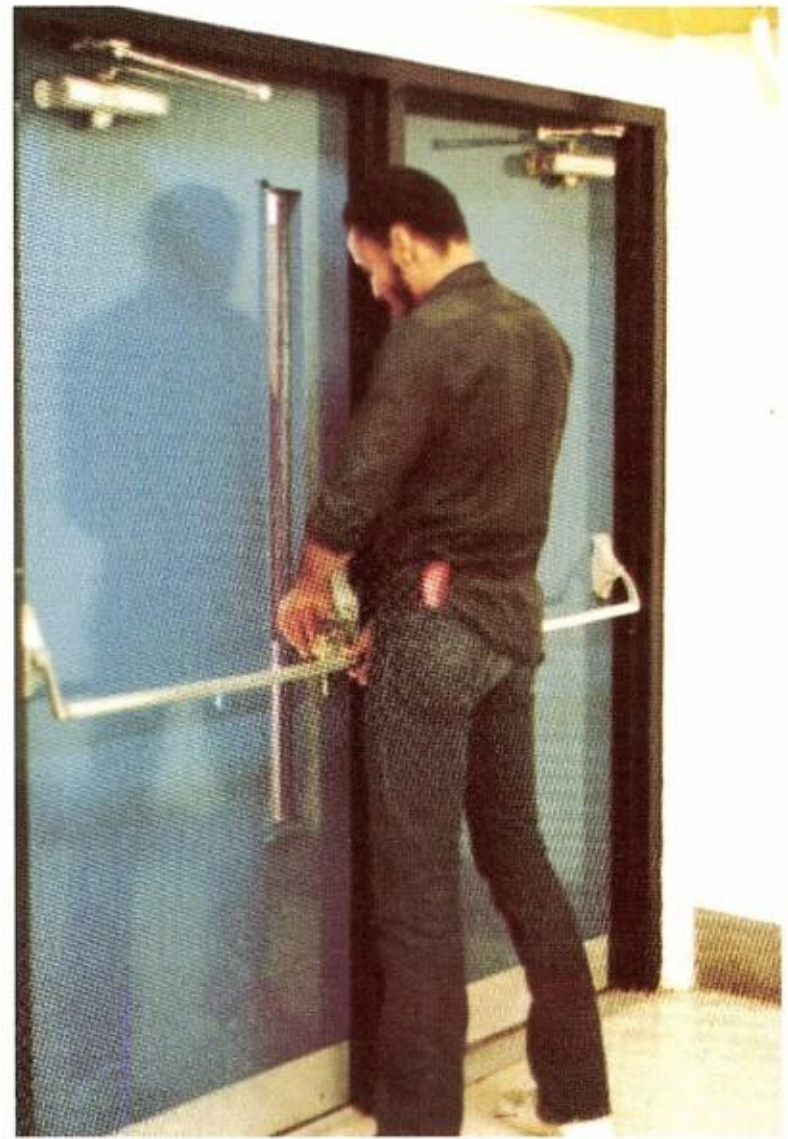

The Police gained world-wide recognition with the release of their latest album, Synchronicity, which was accompanied by an exceptional amount of album sales and a number of sold-out concerts.

Due to its convenient location and inexpensive prices, McDonald's was a favorite food stop for students. Mr. Gatti's was a popular gathering spot after Friday night football games, as was the newly established hamburger chain, Fuddruckers.

A new line of characters known as Care Bears was well accepted by students at Klein as they served to decorate cards, folders, and many other novelty items. Garfield and Smurfs still ranked highly among students' favorite personalities. Photos by Jen Newton.

Students climb ladder toward graduation

High school. Many things come to mind at its mention, but most important comes one's trials and tribulations incurred while climbing the step ladder to graduation.

As a freshman, being "little fish in a big pond" meant just that. Freshman ridicule seemed to be a favorite game played by upperclassmen. Freshmen were also unfortunate in that they were also unable to drive, still depending on parents for weekend entertainment.

Climbing one rung on the ladder, sophomores began taking on a much more regarded position. Many were fortunate enough to receive their drivers licenses, enabling them to experience a more active social life. Grades were more important as sophomores began thinking of college.

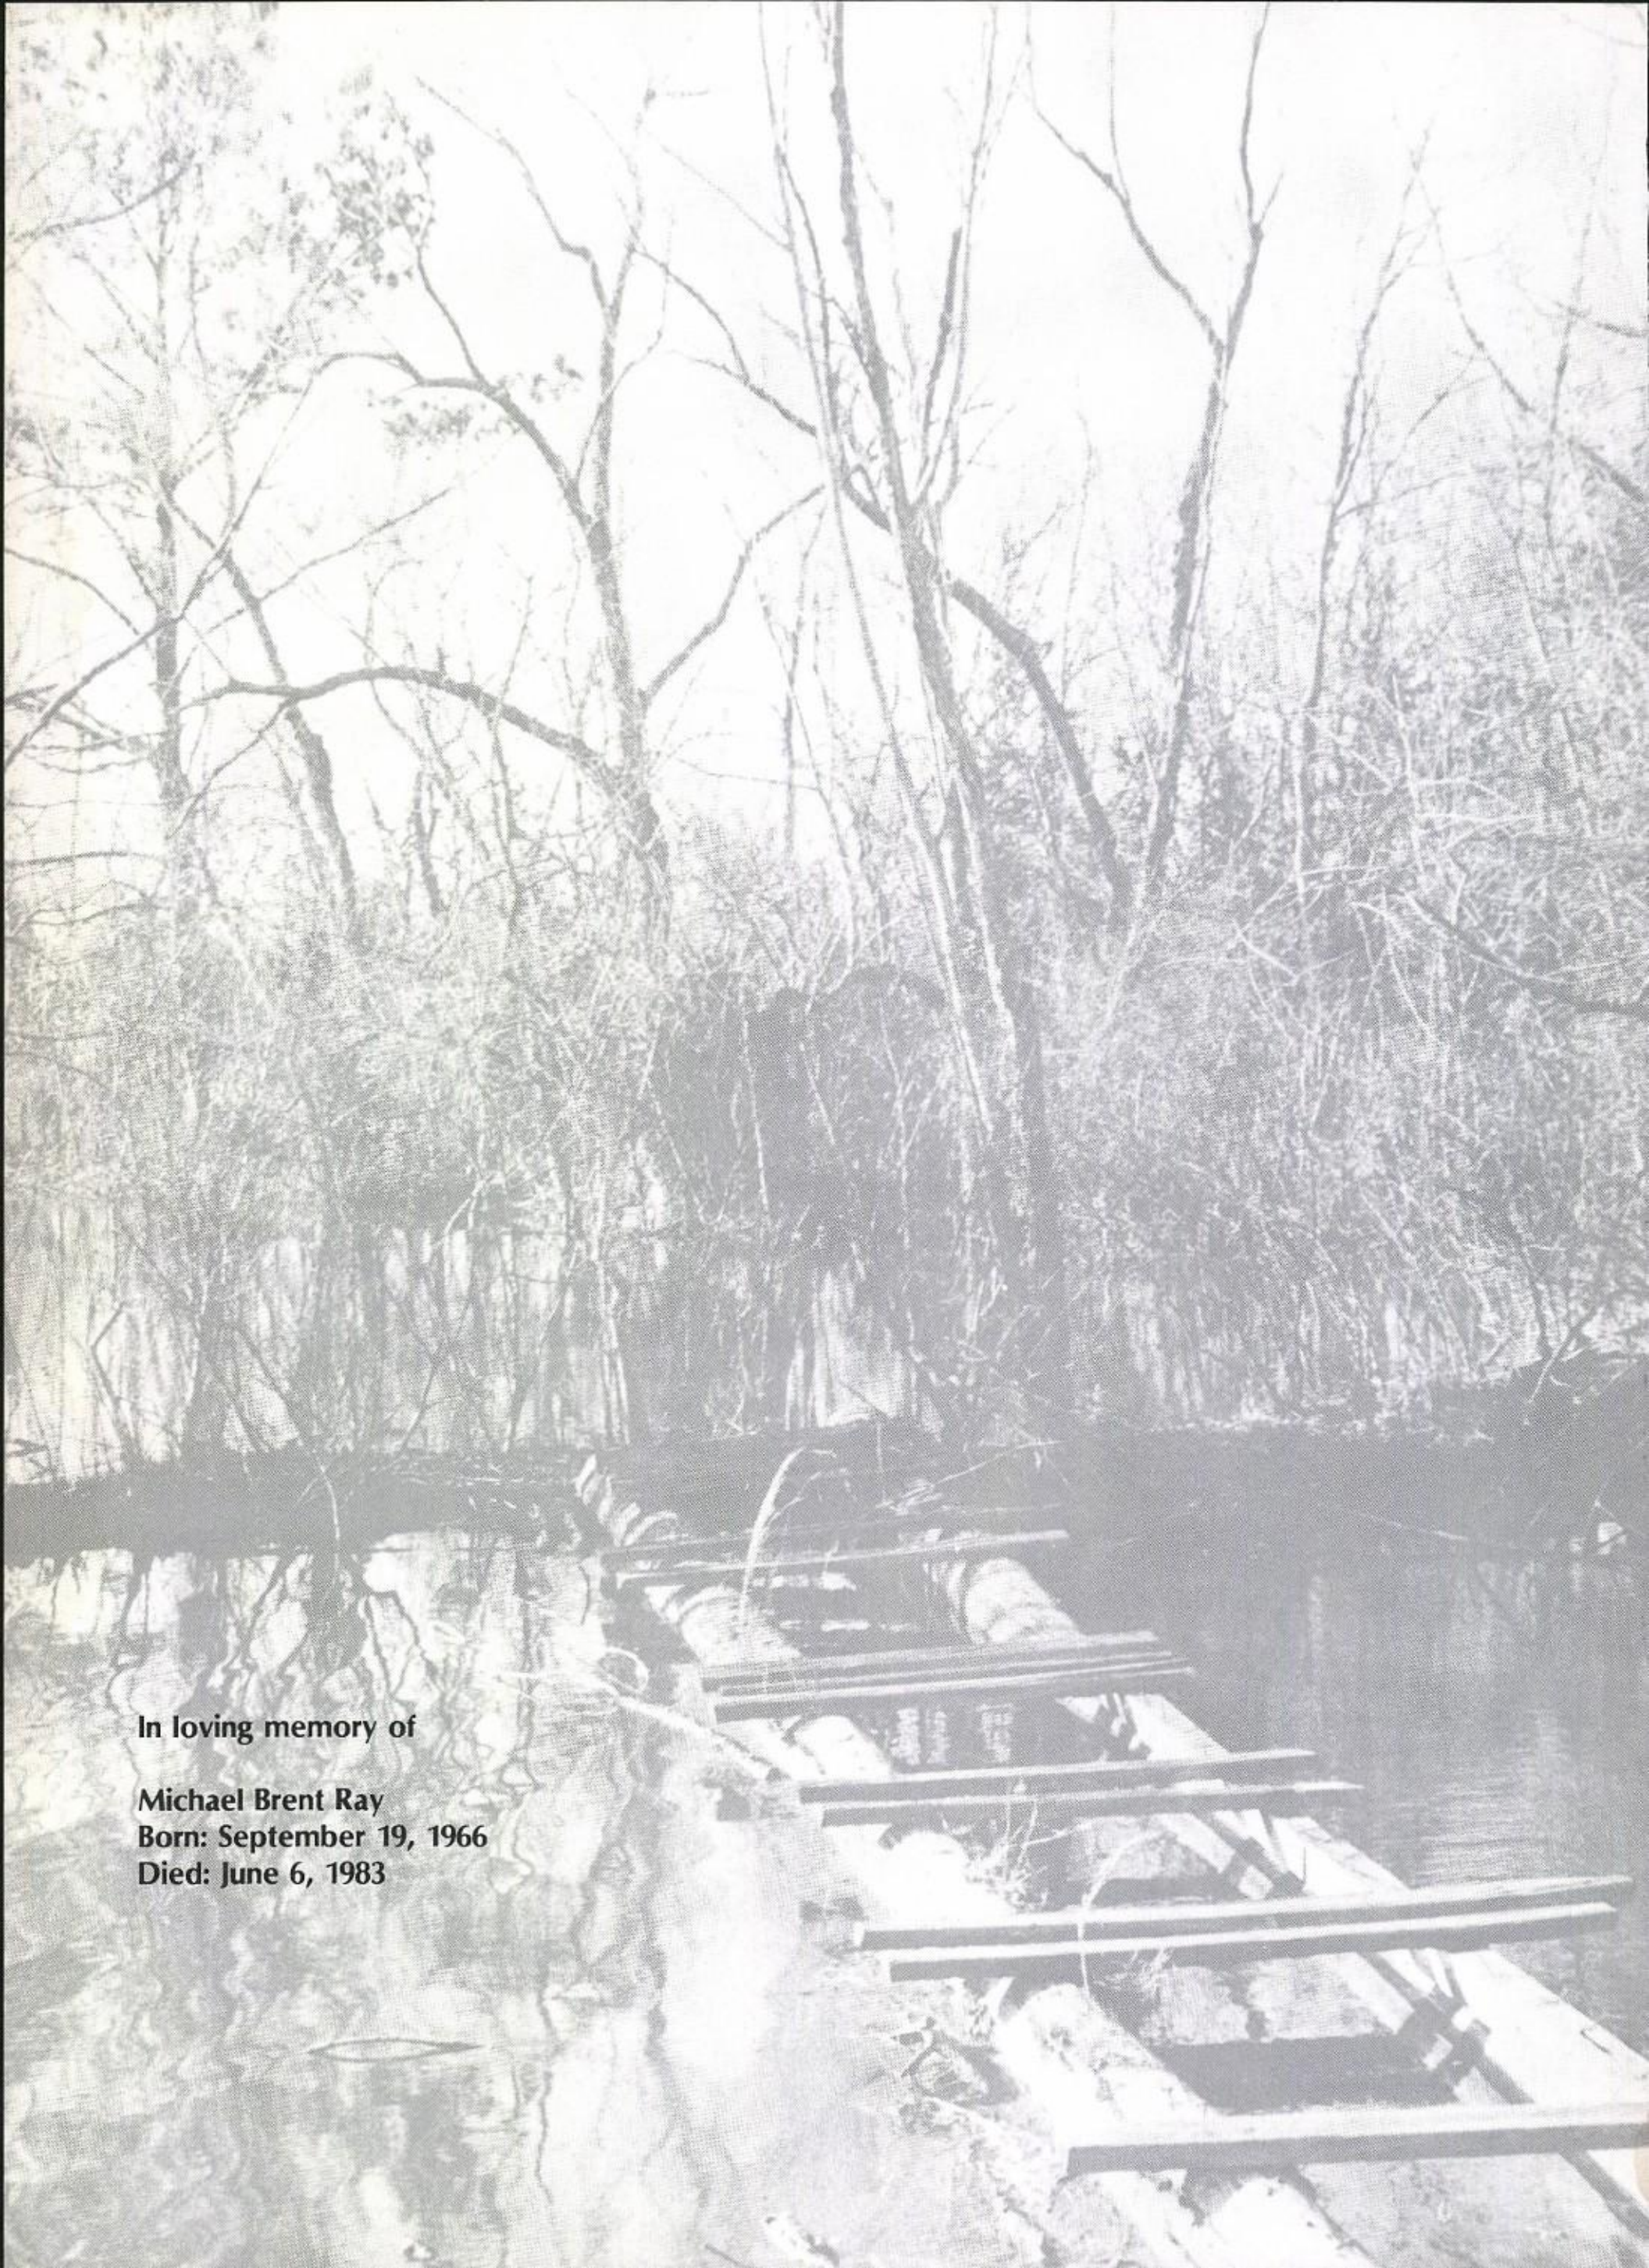

On the third step, juniors felt more accepted as a major part of Klein and more importantly, as adults. They began preparing for college by taking the PSAT and attending College Night to get a feel for the variety of opportunities open to them. Social life was very satisfying because parents were more lenient and trusting.

The fourth and final step brought with it many new and exciting emotions and challenges. Seniors struggled through first semester, striving for more points toward their GPA's. They took a more sentimental view of things, always thinking that they were the last. Futures were very important and influenced every step seniors took.

Seniors experienced an obvious camaraderie and acted with more independence and maturity. Social life was at its peak because the seniors held more responsibility and managed their own lives.

Each step in achieving the final goal of graduation was vital. The 1983-84 school year was a stepping stone for all. The class of '84 graduated knowing that they had it all.

In loving memory of

When I first accepted the responsibilities of being the editor of Klein's '83-84 yearbook, I accepted a great personal challenge. My ambition was to create a quality book that would please the people of Klein with more creativity, color, accuracy and individualism than ever before. For giving me this opportunity, I owe special thanks to Mrs. Davelyn Kennedy.

I want to express my sincerest appreciation to adviser Sheila Alexander for her never-ending enthusiasm and her devotion to the attainment of our goal. She is a true professional and an enormous credit to Klein's journalism department. Besides being a leader in the production of this book, she was a patient, understanding person whose friendship to me is priceless. I would also like to extend many thanks to Mrs. Linda Kennedy for joining us during the year and bringing with her much knowledge and experience. Her concern for our success and her drive for disciplined work was essential to our accomplishment.

Principal Ken Laird was a major contributor to Bearkat '84. His guidance and authorizations was invaluable. We were all flattered by his interest in our work. Recognition should also be given to the eight assistant principals for their cooperation and assistance. I would also like to thank teachers for their leniency during our deadlines.

The production of this book would not have been possible without the crucial work of Henington Publications Specialist Lois Niemann. We appreciate her special attention to our problems, however big or small they were.

Those who did the actual work on layouts, copy, captions, etc., need also be recognized. Lee Armstrong gave all that he had in order to better this book. I literally would not have made it without his help, understanding and friendship. I would also like to thank Pam Deleery for her work on the Senior Index and her supervision of the class sections; Maureen Corcoran for her work on Organizations and Student Life; Robyn Davenport for her work on Organizations and with Brent Gordon on Sports; Lori Lovett and Kristen Moore for their beautiful Honors and Student Life sections; and to Teresa Ohnysty, Lisabeth Clawson, Tracy Cummins, Kelly Weinert and Richard Holst for their after-school work and their dedication to yearbook. Thanks to Yvonne Fisher for handling the business and advertising and for meeting her deadlines.

I owe much to the photographers for their contributions and hard work at deadline time. Thanks to Lee Armstrong and Phillip Martin, and especially to Jen Newton for her responsibility and professionalism.

The newspaper staff should also be acknowledged for their invaluable help. I am grateful for the copy-writing done in a rush by David Johnson and Spencer Greene.

Finally, I would like to express my deep appreciation to my parents for all of their help, patience, love and understanding, and to Butch Giovannangelo for his encouragement and support.

Throughout the year, the yearbook staff worked their hardest to preserve this year's memories. It was with great expectations that we presented Bearkat '84 to you, hoping that you would perceive it as having it all.
